Fascist Minister Claims Country Is Ready for 'Any War.'

Ethiopia Requests League Session

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

In notes to Geneva Ethiopia asked a league council session, while Italy blamed Ethiopia for breakdown of conciliation efforts.

In Rome it was reported Italy was willing to arbitrate. Fascist meetings hailed Mussolini and shouted against Ethiopia, Japan and England.

Italy orders all nationals out of Ethiopia. Haile Selassie's press replied to attacks.

In Paris the foreign office announced the League of Nations Council will meet July 31 to tackle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Norman Davis predicted the league would banish the threat of war.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 25.—Great Britain banned arms exports both to Italy and Ethiopia today, but left the door open to reconsider her action if peace efforts at Geneva fail.

It was learned the government would survey the situation anew in case the League of Nations Council was unable to halt threatened Italo-Ethiopian hostilities or if one or more nations refused to abide by league obligations.

Belgium joined Great Britain in refusing to ship arms to Ethiopia. Premier Van Zeeland announced practical reasons concerning present circumstances dictated the embargo.

In announcing that arms exports would not be licensed to either disputant, Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons Great Britain would permit transit of arms destined for Ethiopia across British territory. This, he said, is necessitated under the Treaty of 1930.

Britain Seeks Peace.

Sir Samuel emphasized Britain's determination to exhaust every possible recourse against war, saying:

"The Government is doing its best to make possible the peaceful outcome of the present unhappy dispute and would not wish to do anything which might prejudice the situation, so it will for the present, not issue licenses for the export of arms from this country either to Italy or Ethiopia."

Meanwhile, it was said authoritatively Britain still did not know what Premier Benito Mussolini would do about the League of Nations council session next week. Britain and France have agreed to discuss all questions dealing with the Italo-Ethiopian controversy, but Il Duce has kept silent.

The French cabinet is considering Premier Pierre Laval's four-point program to use every resource of the league's conciliation procedure. Paris reports said French and British diplomats were urging Mussolini to invoke article 12 of the league covenant, providing for arbitration, to forestall Ethiopia's recourse to article 15, for council settlement.

Geneva received notes from both Ethiopia and Italy, each accusing the other of responsibility for the threat of hostilities. The African nation urged that the council be convoked.

Arbitration Offered.

Rome dispatches indicated that Italy's previous disinclination to try conciliation was softening. The government was reported to have proposed resumption of sessions of the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission, which broke up at Scheveningen, the Netherlands, recently.

A martial spirit prevailed in capitals of both the contending nations. Tens of thousands of Fascists massed in Venezia Square to shout support of Il Duce and opposition to Ethiopia and Japan.

Union Seeking Writ to Enjoin Taxi Fare Cut

Drivers Going to Court Today and Will Picket P.U.C. Meanwhile.

An injunction to restrain the Public Utilities Commission from enforcing its new rate restrictions will be sought in District Court today and pickets will be thrown about the District Building, union taxi drivers decided yesterday at a noisy session of Cab Drivers Protective Union in Jimmie Lake's Ninth street restaurant.

Request for the restraining order will be filed this morning. At 1 o'clock union drivers will again gather at the restaurant for another meeting in protest against the P. U. C. rates, which, they claim, are insufficient to allow Washington cab drivers a living wage.

Picketing of the District Building, where the P. U. C. offices are located, is scheduled to start at 8 a. m.

The protested rates are for a 20-30-50-70 cent schedule and were recently approved by the commission.

Bernard L. Henning, gray-haired president of the union, led yesterday's protest against the union, reading the thirteenth amendment against slavery and declaring that Washington rates impose a form of slavery upon drivers in this city.

"The P. U. C. demands a driver charge no more than 30 cents for a ride from the Navy Yard to Decatur street," he said. "To the nearest section of Decatur street it is 7 miles; to the farthest point, 8. Unless the driver picks up a return fare he must drive from 14 to 16 miles for 30 cents. That's not more than enough to pay for his gasoline, not to speak of his cab company rent."

Henning said he is continuing to drive on his old 20-40-60-80 basis, and defied arrest.

"Then we could have a test case

House Attack Rakes Hitler As 'Madman'

Rep. Dickstein Assails Nazis in Fiery Speech; Blanton Hits Back.

The German Situation.

On the House floor Representative Dickstein denounced Hitler as "this madman of Germany." Senator King considered introducing a resolution for a Senate investigation of the "brutal treatment of Jews and Catholics."

Steel Helmet units in western Mecklenberg were dissolved and their property seized. The Catholic press and foreign journalism again were attacked.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York was adamant in his refusal to permit a German to obtain a masseur's license.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional perturbation over German religious and other policies reached a new peak yesterday as Adolph Hitler was singled out by name for a stinging verbal assault on the House floor.

Calling Hitler "this madman of Germany," with an "insane" theory of government, Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, asserted:

"He has even stooped to cold-blooded murder in his self-appointed task of enforcing upon the people of Germany his own absolute control of the affairs of state, the affairs of religion, the affairs of all internal matters, and the affairs of matters relating to foreign trade."

Even as the New Yorker spoke, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, was pondering introduction of a resolution for a Senate investigation of what he called the "cruel and brutal" treatment of Jews and Catholics in Germany. He said on Wednesday the inquiry should determine whether this country should sever diplomatic relations with the Nazi government.

King told the Senate the resolution would go in yesterday, but some sources said he might reconsider and not submit it after all.

Treaty Violation Denied.

Publicly silent for the most part concerning the recent blasts against Germany, the State Department did say yesterday it had no record of any United States citizen in Germany being discriminated against in violation of the German-American commercial treaty of 1925.

The department spoke in answer to an inquiry from Paul Windels, New York corporation counsel.

Contending that Jewish-American citizens in Germany had been denied their rights, Mayor LaGuardia of New York recently denied a masseur's license to a German alien—the action becoming a center of controversy.

Turning to negotiations for a reciprocal trade agreement with Germany, Dickstein told the House a recognition of "personal freedom of religious practice and worship by American citizens in Germany should be an essential provision of any reciprocal trade agreement which our Secretary of State negotiates with the Reich government."

Blanton Flays Dickstein.

He questioned whether German government officials "imbued with barbarous bigotry would honorably fulfill the provisions of a reciprocal trade agreement unless those provisions were overwhelmingly favorable to Germany."

Leaping to his feet as Dickstein concluded, Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, demanded that America "mind its own business." It was the same warning he had issued Monday when Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, had advocated a boycott on German goods to combat religious persecutions in Germany.

The State Department, Blanton shouted, is the agency to handle business with foreign countries.

"I want the foreign governments of the world to understand," he said, "that the gentleman from New York speaks without authority on this floor. He has no right to castigate the ruler of any for-

CHINATOWN, N. Y.

A 'Bishop' Dies.

A CHINATOWN ex-convict died. Sunday a grand duchess and Broadway stage "royalty" will join Bowery bums in a memorial mourning his passing.

For decades of service to down-and-outers have elapsed since Thomas Joseph Noonan, 57, served time in Sing Sing—earning him the title of "Bishop of Chinatown."

For 28 years Tom headed the Chinatown Rescue Mission, where he dispensed food and "flops" and spiritual aid. But he never mixed them. Derelicts did not have to be "preached at" or "profess conversion" to join Noonan's bread line or sleep on his cots, ranged neatly in a basement once an opium den.

Chinatown Gertie, who sang and danced at old McGuirk's suicide hall; Three Drink Harry, now an ordained Presbyterian minister; Hophead Amy, who peddled dope, are but three of the thousands who began their "reconstruction"—Tom hated the word "conversion"—in the old Chinese theater he made into the "Cathedral of the Underworld."

Noonan, a street waif orphaned at 2, died in Long Island College Hospital of a heart ailment. His work was familiar to thousands who visited his place after its fame caused it to be put on "rubber-neck wagon" tours.

Noonan slept in coal bins and doorways and stole his food from garbage cans and fruit stands as a lad. At 14, he was arrested for stealing shoes. Two years later he was sentenced to two years in Sing Sing for burglary.

A Thanksgiving Day talk by a visiting minister "got under his skin," as Noonan expressed it. Then he heard Maude Ballington Booth, noted prison worker, invite the convicts to visit her when they were released, for aid in re-establishing themselves.

A few months later, a serge "issue" suit on his back and Mrs. Booth's address in his hand, Noonan stood in Grand Central Station. An interview with Mrs. Booth made him a social worker and evangelist the rest of his days.

Glass Assails Eccles' Views In Bank Clash

By the Associated Press.

The Senate heard yesterday a blistering attack by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, on the monetary views of Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board.

Then with a burst of speed it approved the first title of the bank bill making permanent the temporary deposit insurance law.

Supporters of the compromise measure, which gives the Reserve Board majority control over the Nation's credit needs, won the first test when they defeated an attempt by Senator Murphy (Democrat), of Iowa, to strike out a provision requiring State banks with deposits of $1,000,000 or more to become members of the Reserve System by July 1, 1937, in order to retain deposit insurance.

Iowan's Motion Beaten.

The Iowan's motion was rejected by a voice vote and then all of Title One was approved. Under that section, deposits up to $5,000 would be insured. It also lowers the annual assessment on insured banks to one-twelfth of 1 per cent of total deposits and provides for suspension of assessments when the insurance fund reaches $500,000,000, to be resumed when the fund is impaired 15 per cent.

With approval of this title, the heart of the bill placing control over credit in a Federal Reserve Board of seven and five representatives of the regional Reserve Banks was taken up. Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, offered a substitute provding for a Government-owned central bank. Its defeat was predicted by Democratic leaders.

Glass denied the bill was "an Administration" measure. He declared he was "amused" at Gov. Eccles' proposal to prevent inflation through delegation of more power to the Reserve Board than the compromise provides "because of all the inflationists in this country he has exceeded the group."

"It is suggested," Glass asserted, "that the chief advocate of Title II is in a nervous state of anxiety lest we should have inflation in this country. He wants to prevent inflation and deflation.

Eccles Under Criticism.

"Well, we already have more deflation than may be remedied in the next 10 or 20 years to come. As for inflation, I'm amused that the sponsor of this bill wants to prevent inflation, because, of all the inflationists he has exceeded the group."

Glass said that Eccles, the "newest member of the board, never had a day's association with a Federal Reserve bank in his life, but proceeded within 90 days after his nomination to propose revolutionary changes in the system."

The Virginian added that the board "has never had a magician in its membership and hasn't got one now."

Discussing the provisions barring interlocking directorates except to permit a commercial or private banker to serve on his board and the board of "one" other bank, Glass spoke of "jealousy" on the part of an unnamed New York banker of some of his private banking competitors.

"The gentleman who has made the most furore about this provision," he said, "is a great banker whose institution engaged in more vicious and hurtful transactions than any other bank on the American continent and lost millions upon millions of dollars in the process.

"He seems to entertain a jealousy of one or two private bankers in his city, and, through his jealousy of them and enmity toward them, he has stirred up a fuss about this interlocking director provision which permits commercial and private bankers to serve on one other bank board."

Like Coughlin's Proposal.

Nye's proposed substitute would create a "bank of the United States of America" to be the agency of Congress in issuing money and regulating its value.

Modified to provide for a board of directors of 48, one from each State, appointed by the President instead of elected by popular vote as originally framed, the central bank idea, except for that change, was that of Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit.

Means Committee Sets Tentative Rate Schedules.

Yield to Be Less Than Expected

Republicans, Democrats Both Displeased With Measure.

By Robert C. Albright.

A skeleton share-the-wealth tax bill, indefinitely estimated to yield all the way from $200,000,000 to $250,000,000, yesterday was tentatively approved by House Ways and Means Committee Democrats to run headlong into a cross-fire of right and left wing criticism.

Following the general tenor of the President's recommendations, yet disregarding intercorporation dividend tax proposals, and narrowing the proposed range of corporation income levies, the bill bore the stamp of conservative committee handling.

But superimposed on Mr. Roosevelt's proposals was a steeply graduated excess profits tax, spreading from a 5 per cent assessment against 8 to 12 per cent corporation profits, to 20 per cent on profits in excess of 25 per cent.

Features of the rough draft were surtaxes on incomes over $150,000 that would hit only 950 individuals, a tax on inheritances of over $50,000 with special exemptions for blood kin, a gift tax three-fourths the rate of the inheritance levy, and a two-bracket corporation income levy.

Committee "Vague."

Vague conjectures of committee members on probable revenues, and the flat refusal of Chairman Robert L. Doughton "to even make a guess," was attributed to the speed with which the measure was flung together, and the inconclusive character of official estimates.

As outlined by committee spokesmen the bill failed to satisfy either the left-wing "tax-wealth" element in the Senate, or conservative House Republicans who believe the committee should "work from the bottom up" and bring out a budget-balancing measure. Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, immediately branded the bill "a mere face-saver for the President."

Rate Schedules.

Following is an outline of schedules tentatively approved by the committee:

Surtaxes, starting at 54 per cent on $150,000 incomes, and graduated up to 75 per cent on net incomes of over $10,000,000. Estimated yield, $20,400,000.

Inheritance tax starting at 4 per cent on $50,000 bequests, and graduated up to 75 per cent on inheritances over $10,000,000, with exemptions lowered to $10,000 on other than close kin. Estimated yield, $95,000,000.

Gift taxes starting at 3 per cent on gifts of from $50,000 to $60,000, and graduated up to 57 per cent on over $10,000,000, with exemptions reduced to $10,000 on gifts to other than blood kin. Estimated yield, $26,000,000.

A graduated excess profits tax, starting with 5 per cent on profits between 8 and 12 per cent, and ranging upwards to 20 per cent on profits over 25 per cent. Unofficial estimated yield, $100,000,000.

A graduated corporation income tax ranging from 13¼ per cent to 14¼ per cent. No estimates.

President Supported.

Chairman Doughton said the committee would stand with the President against exemptions of corporations from Federal income taxes on gifts to charity, up to 5 per cent of their net earnings.

It is on the proposed corporation income levy, though modified from the President's suggested range of from 10¾ to 16¾ per cent, that the committee probably will encounter its stiffest fight in the House.

The narrow range finally approved, with 13¼ per cent levied on corporate incomes of less than $15,000, and 14¼ on incomes exceeding that amount, was bitterly contested by some Democrats and was finally incorporated in the bill by close vote of 10 to 8.

Ickes Believed Jolted as West Is Chosen Aid

Interior Secretary Says He Is Pleased but Dodges Revealing Queries.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Seldom has an appointment to the "Little Cabinet" stirred up as many reports and as much political gossip as did President Roosevelt's selection yesterday of Charles West, former Ohio member of Congress, for the newly-created post of Undersecretary of Interior.

In the first place West was in the spotlight prior to announcement of his appointment because of his activities as a liaison officer between the White House and Congress during the last winter and spring. In effect he was the President's lobbyist on Capitol Hill and receives his new job, some believe, as a reward for his effective work.

But the most interesting feature of the gossip in political circles which followed the sending of West's name to the Senate was that his appointment constituted the second bump given to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes within the week and that it indicated the regular Democratic organization was taking the Republican Ickes in hand.

According to reports in official quarters yesterday, Ickes had recommended another for the post of Undersecretary. When the President made the West nomination public, Ickes said he regarded his prospective chief aid as well qualified and that he was happy to get him.

But the Interior Secretary flatly refused to discuss reports that he had urged the appointment of Wal-

Knox Charges Plan to Weaken Supreme Court

Says New Deal Deliberately Passes Invalid Acts; to Visit Hoover.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 25.—Col Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher, accused President Roosevelt and his advisers of promoting enactment of laws "for the deliberate purpose of undermining the power and prestige of the Supreme Court."

Col. Knox, mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate, declared his party is engaged "in welding together, in well-rounded form, a program of sound policies upon which it will go to the country with prospects of victory that grow brighter every day, as policy after policy of the Democrats crumbles before the remorseless force of law, logic, and human experience."

Referring to his charge concerning the Supreme Court, Col. Knox, who spoke before the Los Angeles County Republican Assembly, said:

"With a full sense of the meaning of my words, I ask, are such acts in accord with the sacred oath taken not only to defend and to protect, but to preserve the Constitution?"

The publisher plans to visit Herbert Hoover this week at the latter's Stanford University home. Several high in the Republican party have called there recently. Although the visits have been characterized as "purely social," Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland, for one, emerged from a conference with the former President to lambast the Administration in terms as strong as those of Col. Knox.

Eight New Objectors Imperil Clearance of District Slums

Washington's ambitious slum clearance project negotiated one hurdle yesterday in the District Supreme Court and then ran into eight others, some of which threatened to be insuperable.

Miss Minnie Keyes, who filed the original objection to the condemnation of her 11 tracts within the confines of the "War College Project," withdrew her objections early in the day. Within a few minutes, however, eight other property owners filed demurrers to surrendering their properties, and unless the Government can overcome their objections, the $3,000,000 project may be doomed.

Those filing demurrers were Thomas P. Brown, M. G. Murr, Sarah Zanoff, Warfield King, Israel Diamond, Jesse L. Keiskill, Alexander Muncaster and Allen W. Kelley. The addresses of their holdings were not given in their suits.

It was understood that Miss Keyes, who inherited some of her properties from a boarder, obtained a much higher figure for her houses after she had vigorously objected to the condemnation of them by the Government. She will receive $14,600 from the group, although she now gets approximately $1,100 annually in rents.

The eight objectors based their action on the ground the property was not being taken for a public use.

Richmond Student Disappears In France on Bicycle Trip

Washington friends were making frantic efforts last night to learn details of the disappearance of E. Griffith Dodson, jr., of Richmond, son of the clerk of the Virginia House of Delegates, while on a bicycle tour of the French Loire Valley with Robert L. St. John, son of Charles H. St. John, vice president of the Griffith-Consumers Co. here.

A United Press dispatch from Tours said the boys, both students of the University of Virginia and star athletes, were cycling through the terrifically hot Loire, known as the French "Death Valley," when young Dodson disappeared.

Dodson rode off on an unknown mission, according to the press service, and when he failed to return St. John telephoned the United States consulate, which notified the French government.

The students had cycled from Loire, it was said, inspecting vineyards and ancient castles, and were staying at the Crowned Oxen Hotel in the village of Blere.

Dodson is 23 years old and St. John 22. They are members of the same class at the university; were to have received their undergraduate degrees next June and to have entered the university law school in the fall of 1936.

Dodson was a football star at the university. St. John, who also played football, was captain of the track team.

Dodson and St. John left Norfolk June 7, sailing to England by way of Halifax.

Processing Tax To Cause Battle Of Conferees

Senate Amendment Hit by House Chairman in Statement.

By the Associated Press.

A battle of Senate-House conferees over amending the agricultural adjustment bill to allow processors to sue for recovery of taxes was presaged yesterday when Chairman Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, lashed out at the Senate for adopting that amendment.

With hundreds of suits already pending throughout the country, Jones, who will head the House conferees next week, said the Senate proposal would create "chaos." He charged that the processor "was merely the agency through which these taxes were passed on to the general public."

Bill "Too Broad."

While he admitted afterward to newspapermen that "we may have to leave in a provision allowing some suits," he insisted the House would never stand for the "too broad" Senate amendment opening the way to suits by any processor who can prove he paid the tax and did not pass it on to the consumer. Some indication of the "further safeguards" he had in mind was given in his lengthy statement scoring the Senate provision.

"If such suits are permitted, and recovery is had," he said in the statement, "the money should be placed in the custody of the court as a trust fund. The processor, at the most, should be allowed to recover no more than the tax which he has paid on stocks which he has on hand and unsold at the time the suit is instituted.

Defends Consumer.

"The wholesaler should be allowed to recover taxes paid on any stocks which he has on hand and unsold at such time. The retailer and distributor should certainly be accorded the same privilege. In fairness, the balance should go to the consumer, who is the ultimate purchaser, but he probably would not be located."

"No just man would deprive a citizen of his right to recover any taxes improperly paid by him," the chairman said. "On the other hand, no reasonable man should ask to recover taxes which he has passed on."

The absence yesterday of House Republican Leader Snell necessitated postponing until Monday the sending of the bill to conference. Also viewed as a source of conference controversy, is the Senate's elimination of House provision for using 30 per cent of customs receipts to subsidize agricultural exports. Jones has made it plain he would stick for it.

Incorrigible Communist Doomed by Nazi Court

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—The dread people's court today sentenced Rudolf Claus, whom the prosecutor described as "an incorrigible Communist and rogue," to die under the headsman's ax.

Claus, an associate of Max Hoelz, German Cummunist leader who escaped to Russia, was sentenced to life imprisonment for communistic activities in 1921. Later he was amnestied and, it was charged, took up his old ways.

A woman, Eva Lippold, 26, who was said to be a "fanatical Communist," was sentenced to nine years in prison. Three other defendants drew terms of four, seven and 13 years. The four were charged with acting as couriers for Communists in the Saar Basin before its reunion with the Reich.

Boulder Dam Strike To Be Settled by Ickes

Las Vegas, Nev., July 25 (AP).—After two weeks of strike dissension at Boulder Dam an agreement to submit the question of demanded wage increases to Secretary of the Interior Ickes was announced today.

Ickes will be asked for an allocation of funds to bring the wage scale up to the PWA level.

The several hundred strikers were expected to return to work immediately.

The workmen ask $1 an hour for skilled and 75 cents for unskilled labor. The Six Companies, Inc., builders of the dam, have refused to pay this, saying wages average 71 cents an hour.

Lobby Probe Repeats History and Backfires; Costly Virgin Islands; Heat Waves.

By Raymond Clapper

CONGRESSIONAL investigations have a disconcerting way of backfiring. There have been some sad experiences. Hoover went through several. He stirred up an investigation of the shipbuilders' lobby and the show was so good that the late Senator Caraway decided to investigate the tariff lobby. He was able to smear a number of Hoover advisers with rather sticky mud.

Suspicions arose in Mr. Hoover's mind that the breaks in the stock market which followed each of his annoucements that prosperity was just around the corner were inspired by prominent Democratic bear traders. Accordingly, he inspired his friends in the Senate to launch the stock market investigation. It got out of hand and made important political fodder for the Roosevelt campaign. The President is still capitalizing on the disclosures.

The present utilities investigation grew out of a Republican effort to show up the Administration's lobby activity for the death sentence provision. But it has actually done serious damage to the case of the utilities and put a studded club in the hands of the Administration.

And the Virgin Islands mess was stirred up in part by the Department of Interior itself which circulated—later attempting to withdraw them—reprints of an exposure of conditions there. Intended to undermine T. Webber Wilson, the anti-Ickes judge in the islands, the subsequent investigation trapped everyone and Ickes had to take his own governor out in the house cleaning.

About those Virgin Islands. Nearly everyone has forgotten the date. It was almost 20 years ago, January 25, 1917, while we were rolling up our sleeves to make the world safe for democracy. That was the great day on which dear old Uncle Sap, with the best intentions in the world, let Denmark sell him the Virgin Islands for $25,000,000.

American Navy men were afraid the Germans might use the islands for a submarine base. There are several ways to deal with such a situation, but naturally we picked the most expensive one and bought up the place.

After we had made the world safe for democracy, it never occurred to anyone that the thing to do was to give the islands away, even if they had to be bought every time we had a war. We have to have a colonial empire so we added what Mr. Hoover described as a poorhouse, a handful of little mountain peaks sticking up out of the blue waters of the Caribbean, with not enough inhabitants, donkeys included, to fill the seats in Griffith's ball park here; islands whose most visible commercial activity is provided by scores of Negro harbor boys in little tin boats, who dive for pennies around incoming steamers.

Every self-respecting power has to have a colonial empire. It is a sign of national virility. Only ours makes us look like a college freshman trying to grow a moustache.

That is how it happens that President Roosevelt has to pause every day in the midst of spending $4,800,000,000 to be mayor of a place the size of Salina, Kans., and infinitely more troublesome.

* * *

That vacation trip which Postmaster General Farley is making to Hawaii is not as innocent as it looks. While he is out there, he will have a first-hand look into the transpacific air-mail route, which is the object of a scramble between the Pan-American Airways and other interests.

Postal officials are eager to extend the air-mail system to the Philippines and China. It is the most important air pioneering the Government has undertaken and has more behind it than the United States mails.

* * *

Political parade: Representative Huddleston's break with the Administration over the utilities death sentence is bouncing back. Administration friends are looking for a candidate to run against him in the Birmingham, Ala., district next year. They approached Hugh Grant, former secretary to Senator Black and now in the State Department, but he is not interested. He's going to be minister to Albania any day now . . . Mr. Roosevelt won a moral victory. House Democrats want to keep his sliding scale corporation tax, but instead of a sliding range from 10 to 17 per cent, they propose a spread of only 1 per cent, just for the principle of the thing . . . The heat's getting them. Huey Long calls the President a faker. Harry Hopkins tells a delegation of Congressmen they can't have any of his jobs. Speaker Byrns, that tough old rooster, is getting thin-skinned. A utilities executive can't remember what he did yesterday. Representative Blanton tells another Congressman he has no right to call Hitler a madman. Federal Reserve Governor Eccles says he wants to prevent inflation, which makes Senator Glass laugh. The House votes that bona fide hotels and clubs can buy their liquor in barrels, which will make it easier to cut the customer's drinks. Representative Patton, of Texas, says that mysterious visit from a utilities executive was almost entirely social. Huey Long protests too much that he wouldn't give a tinker's dam to be President. Boss Tom Pendergast, of Kansas City, waited until he got his man in as Missouri works administrator before he kicked in with $5,000 to the Democratic national committee.

* * *

Someone who has been reading about the utilities lobby investigation telephones in the suggestion that members of Congress come out in their true colors and put on the uniforms of Western Union messengers.

Chance Arrest Traps a Fugitive

Suspicions that led Detective Sergt. Thomas Sweeney to arrest Harry Berger, 40, in the 2400 block of Sixteenth street northwest Wednesday were well founded.

After Berger had been fingerprinted and photographed at police headquarters it was found that he has served in Sing Sing prison and about 20 years in various other penal institutions. He is wanted, it was learned, in Philadelphia for hold-up and assault of a jewelry salesman and in Schenectady, N. Y., for forgery.

At the time of his arrest Berger had on his person a loaded automatic pistol and a 6-inch knife. He told police that he will waive extradition and return to the Pennsylvania city upon the arrival of officers.

Rabbi Denied Nazi Visa.

St. Louis, July 25 (AP).—Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman said today that a visa to visit Germany had been refused him by Reinold Freytag, German consul in St. Louis. The rabbi, explaining that Freytag offered no explanation for the refusal, said, "The Nazi government must have something to hide." He last visited Germany in 1933.

Pensions Unsettled, Conferees Recess

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's personal intervention failed yesterday to break the congressional deadlock over excluding private pension plans from his social security program.

Despite the President's expressed opposition to the proposed exemption, House and Senate conferees were unable to reach an agreement on the disputed amendment and recessed until next week, when another attempt will be made.

House conferees not only refused to accept the amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, to exclude private pension systems, but declined to consider compromises.

Roosevelt Selection of Ex-Representative Stirs Political Gossip.

ter T. Fisher, son of Walter L. Fisher, Secretary of the Interior in the Taft Administration. He evaded questions as to whether he had recommended West's appointment or whether it had originated with the White House.

Subsequently it was reported that Ickes had urged Harry Slattery, his personal assistant, for the Undersecretaryship. Slattery, a lawyer well known in progressive circles, has been in the Interior Department off and on since 1909 and was secretary to Gifford Pinchot, when the latter precipitated the charges which forced out Richard A. Ballinger as Secretary of the Interior. Fisher succeeded Ballinger.

Incidentally, it is a queer freak of the drift of political gossip which yesterday wove together names which played so great a part in the Ballinger scandal which rocked the country 24 years ago.

At all events, it was reported that Ickes wished someone other than West as his chief aid, but that the President would not accede to his request. As a result political quarters drew the conclusion that Ickes had lost some of his influence in the Roosevelt Administration and that the "regular Democrats" were hedging in the Republican Secretary of the Interior.

Earlier in the week Ickes suffered a set-back when the President abruptly removed Paul M. Pearson as Governor of the Virgin Islands. Pearson was strongly, almost passionately, supported by Ickes and while it is true that Mr. Roosevelt let Ickes select Pearson's successor, Lawrence W. Cramer, it is by no means certain the Senate will confirm this choice.

Unpopular at Capitol.

The majority of the Democrats on Capitol Hill do not like Ickes and are constantly grumbling about him. They contend that not only does he refuse to "play ball" with them, but that on occasion he has been brusque, if not discourteous, in dealing with them. Forces on Capitol Hill slowly but constantly have chiseled away Ickes' authority and influence.

Now it appears that one of the Democratic boys from Capitol Hill—West—is to be intrenched in the Interior Department. He understands practical politics and is sympathetic with the difficulties of members of Congress. In the future, it is expected, Capitol Hill Democrats, as well as other party stalwarts, will deal with West when they have business at the Interior Department.

West, however, is not a mere politician or "lame duck" being taken care of by the Administration. Indeed, he could qualify with the best as a member of the "brain trust." Born 40 years ago, West has several degrees, including a doctorate of laws. He studied abroad and taught political science at the College of Wooster, Tufts College, Harvard University and was professor of political science at Denison University at Granville, Ohio.

Served Two Terms.

He served two terms in the House from Ohio, ending his career there last year when he aspired to a Senate seat as a "new dealer" but was defeated in the Democratic primary by Vic Donahey, who holds more conservative views. After his defeat he was appointed to an $8,000 post in the Farm Credit Administration, but he spent most of his time as the White House liaison officer on Capitol Hill. The post to which he has just been appointed will pay $10,000 annually.

Business Gain Held to Be Near If Unmolested

Bankruptcy Referee Group Hears Administration Policies Attacked.

Business could recover if left alone six months, Chester Leasure, legislative representative of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, last night told delegates of the National Association of Referees in Bankruptcy at the closing session of the opening day of their tenth annual conference at the Wardman Park Hotel.

In a slashing speech, Leasure attacked the Administration's policy on the Constitution. If the people wanted a change, he said, let them have it in an orderly way instead of letting the bureaucrats disregard the Constitution as they have in the Guffey coal bill.

L. Earl Curry, of Miami, Fla., president, presided at the opening session. The delegates were welcomed to Washington by H. Winship Wheatley, president of the District Bar Association. The morning and afternoon meetings were devoted to the reports of officers and committee chairmen.

Members and their wives were received at an informal tea held on the lawn of the Wardman Park Hotel, at which Mrs. Fred J. Eden, wife of the referee in bankruptcy for the District, was hostess.

The 242 referees who comprise the association administer 60,000 cases a year with liabilities aggregating over $1,000,000,000.

Today's discussions will be led by Paul H. King, of Detroit, and Carl D. Friebolin, of Cleveland. Speakers at the annual dinner tonight will be Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the District Court of Appeals; Solicitor General Stanley F. Reed and Mr. King.

Hopkins Names Advisory Unit To Aid Works

New Board Members Will Receive No Pay for Services.

An "outside point of view" on the Works Progress Administration is to be provided by a new Works Progress Advisory Board appointed yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator.

The board will consist of from five to seven members. The first three appointed are Edward A. O'Neal 3d, of Alabama, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Ernest Glein, of Chicago, associate publisher of National Weeklies, vice president of Leicht Press and publisher of the Staats-Herold; and George Creel, of San Francisco, author. Others are to be named later.

A statement by Hopkins said:

"The Works Progress Advisory Board has been established so that the Works Progress Administration may receive the benefit of advice of qualified people representing important segments of American life.

"The board will act as outside observers of Works Progress Administration operations and has been asked to give us the help of unbiased and unobstructed perspective of the program."

Meanwhile it was announced that the PWA revolving fund has grown to a quarter of a billion dollars as a result of an agreement reached by Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, and Secretary Ickes, as PWA administrator. Under the agreement the RFC will purchase at cost to PWA securities received for loans made by PWA up to the limit set by law, $250,000,000. The fund will be available to public bodies for loans under the PWA act.

2 Identify Prisoner In Labatt Kidnaping

Hammond, Ind., July 25 (AP).—Police Chief Tom Martinson announced late today that two Canadian witnesses whose names were withheld had identified James Parker, alias Michael McCardell, 42, as a member of the gang which kidnaped John S. Labatt, wealthy London (Ontario) brewer, a year ago.

The identification, Martinson said, followed a tentative identification made by the two persons a week ago from photographs of Parker, under arrest here on a charge of armed robbery.

Hitler Seizes Veterans' Land In New Attack

Turns On Group Which Aided Him Gain Dictatorship.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 25.—Nazism's sweeping offensive against "reactionaries" struck simultaneously today the Catholic press, foreign journalism and the Steel Helmet Veterans' Organization, with the latter the hardest hit.

Steel Helmet units in western Mecklenburg were dissolved and their property was "provisionally seized and sequestered" on the ground that the veterans had resisted Nazi orders, refused to participate in air defense drills and spread "mendacious rumors, bordering on high treason."

Indications were that the Stahlhelm, which helped put Adolf Hitler into power, soon would be banned throughout the Reich, despite Der Fuehrer's reported promise to Franz Seldte, minister of labor and Stahlhelm leader, not to dissolve it.

Catholic editors found cause for concern in the fact that the three months given them to bring their newpapers into accord with "the national socialist limit," expired today.

They wondered how soon Max Amann, president of the Reich press chamber and boss of the German publishing business, would act on the decree he issued April 15 ordering the newspapers to show they agreed with Nazi party principles or suffer suspension.

A demand for complete elimination of Catholic newspapers as part of the drive against "political Catholicism" appeared in the Nazi Party organ at Baden, "Fuehrer."

Nazi newspapers with one voice assailed the foreign press for "slanderous, biased reporting and exaggeration" in connection with the government's anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic campaign, pointing to disorders in other nations to support their contention that the pot was calling the kettle black.

Front page headlines concerning the "foreign atrocity" press recalled "daily lynchings in the United States," religious riots in Belfast and anti-Semitic disorders in Algiers in accusing the American, British and French press of spreading lies or playing up German happenings to distract attention from conditions at home.

Emil Stuertz, Nazi section leader, writing in the party's official district organ, Westfaelische Landes Zeitung, declared such tactics as indiscriminate window smashing and rioting were unworthy of the cause.

Party Assailed.

He assailed party members who "rush about howling hysterically 'Jews, our misfortune,' plaster offensive placards on Jewish shop windows * * * (and) wax highly indignant over some miserable woman who throws herself away on a Jew * * *."

The idea behind the new move against the Steel Helmets, it appeared, was the old Nazi idea that all former soldiers' groups should be fused into one "Nazified" organization.

Increasing demands for such unification included that of the Danzig newspaper Vorposten, which said unification would bend Steel Helmet "reactionaryism" to the Nazi will.

Indicative of the present status of Seldte was the point-blank refusal of District Governor Loeper of Brunswick-Anhalt to accede to Seldte's request to see the document pertaining to dissolution of the organization in Brunswick.

Hindenburg Protested.

The Steel Helmet organ, Der Front Soldat, said, regarding the dissolutions, only this: "We are sorry we cannot report certain developments because of higher considerations." Significantly, however, it printed on its front page a facsimile of a letter the late President Paul von Hindenburg wrote refusing to visit the Rhineland until the Steel Helmet ban then in effect was removed.

Meanwhile, an anti-Jewish boycott was tightening throughout the Reich and leaders of Berlin's Jewish community said their business soon might be ruined "with conditions just as bad or worse, because they are not so open as the sensational boycott of April 1, 1933."

A Palcor (Jewish) News Agency dispatch from Jerusalem said Heinnich Wolff, German consul general in Palestine, had been recalled, allegedly because his wife was of Jewish parentage.

New Dealers Termed 'Political Parasites'

Oklahoma City, July 25 (AP).—Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Cabinet of Herbert Hoover, in an interview today called New Deal experts "political parasites who would not spend a dime of their own money to stop an earthquake."

Hurley, here on personal business, said he had noticed a growing feeling throughout the country that "hard times are about over." He said he thought the feeling was due largely to recent Supreme Court decisions holding certain recovery measures unconstitutional.

eign country, no matter how much he doesn't like him."

The Hague Cabinet Resigns in Crisis

Divided for Some Time Over Money Policies.

By the Associated Press.

The Hague, The Netherlands, July 26 (Friday).—Premier Hendryk Colijn early today tendered the resignation of his cabinet to Queen Wilhelmina. A decision from her accepting or rejecting the resignation was expected later in the day.

The cabinet has been divided over the premier's plan to save the guilder from devaluation. The Queen tonight authorized the government to take any measures necessary to defend the currency.

The Bank of The Netherlands yesterday was obliged to deliver gold to an amount estimated at 25,000,000 guilder, considerably below Wednesday's losses. The last statement of the bank showed about £96,000,000 in gold on hand.

(The Netherlands guilder firmed against the pound in London yesterday, closing at 7.35½, as compared with the previous day's close of 7.37.)

Alaskans Plan to Aid Soviet Arctic Fliers

Juneau, Alaska, July 25 (AP).—All available weather reports and any other aid Alaskans can offer will be given to the Russian fliers who plan a Moscow-California flight via the North Pole and the Arctic "blind spot," Alaskans promised today.

A Soviet representative, N. A. Sokoloff, vice president of Amtorg, Inc., awaited a conference here with Gov. John W. Troy. The Governor was out of the city until tomorrow. After a much-delayed flight from Seattle, Sokoloff arrived here last night.

On receiving definite word from Moscow, Sokoloff said, he will proceed by plane to Fairbanks and thence to the northeast at Aklavik, a tiny trading post on the Arctic Ocean which may be the first point of civilization on the North American continent to be sighted by the fliers.

Colliery Blast Kills 33.

Calcutta, July 25 (U.P.).—Thirty-three persons were killed and 76 injured when India's most serious colliery explosion in many years wrecked the East Indian Railway coal mines at Giridih today. The disaster was caused by accidental ignition of liquid oxygen and explosives. Giridih is 200 miles from Calcutta.

Protests Futile In LaGuardia's Nazi Reprisals

Mayor Adamant Despite Threat of International Repercussions.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—Despite growing threats of international complications, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia stood firm tonight in his resolve to retaliate against Nazi Germany for what he called its discrimination against Jewish Americans.

Overruling his chief legal adviser for the second time, the mayor reaffirmed his stand against recognizing a commercial treaty between Germany and the United States.

The German Embassy in Washington was furnished with a full report on the situation by Acting Consul General Gustav A. Mueller, who took the position that the case was one for the State Department to handle.

Not Up to LaGuardia, He Says.

"It is not for Mayor LaGuardia to decide if treaties have been violated," he said, referring to the mayor's contention that the reciprocal agreement had been voided by Nazi tactics against Jewish Americans."

Responding to an inquiry by Corporation Counsel Paul Windels, the State Department said it had no record of any Americans having been discriminated against in Germany.

LaGuardia said this information was "contrary" to that which he had received as a member of Congress.

In the municipal assembly Alderman Walter R. Hart introduced a resolution calling on President Roosevelt to take steps toward abrogating all treaties between this country and Germany. Hart also sponsored a proposal to outlaw the swastika at public meetings. Both resolutions were sent to committee.

Arose From License Denial.

The present situation, which provoked a protest meeting of the Friends of the New Germany last night, arose when Commissioner of Licenses Paul Moss refused to grant a massage operator's license to a German alien.

In Berlin, the newspaper Hamburger Fremdenblatt assailed LaGuardia's contention that the treaty of 1925 had been violated by Germany, and said he was trying to "meddle in the good relations of two great powers."

Corporation Counsel Windels said the law on the subject was "elementary." LaGuardia, commenting on Windels' second report, said:

"It is an interesting, learned, academic discussion of the general subject. I am concerned with the policy in the enforcement of a city ordinance. My order to the commissioner of licenses stands."

Davis Predicts A Peaceful End Of African War

Senators, State Department Heads to Confer on U. S. Neutrality.

By the Associated Press.

A prediction was made last night by Norman Davis, United States Ambassador at Large, that the League of Nations would bring Italy and Ethiopia to a peaceful settlement of their threatened war.

The statement was made to newspapermen by Davis as he came from a meeting of members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and State Department officials at which neutrality legislation had been discussed.

"It appears to me," Davis said, "that France is not going to break with the league and with England at the same time just to support Italy in its present position. The league was not called into session just for a pleasant gathering."

Committee to Meet.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee, in whose office the conference was held, said an agreement had been reached for a meeting of the full committee early next week with State Department officials and Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Nye (Republican, of North Dakota, to discuss the neutrality legislation.

Present at yesterday's meeting, besides Pittman and Davis, were Acting Secretary Phillips of the State Department, Assistant Secretary R. Walton Moore and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

"As I have said before," Pittman said, "I am not alarmed about the Ethiopian situation. I do not believe there will be a war, but if there is, it need not involve the United States."

Pittman agreed with an earlier statement by Chairman Nye of the Senate Munitions Committee, that neutrality legislation probably would be enacted this session. Pittman declined to outline the scope of the legislation, nor would he say it would follow resolutions proposed by Clark and Nye.

Resolutions Up.

These resolutions, now being studied by the Foreign Relations Committee, would give authority for the President to take steps for preserving American neutrality by barring arms and loans to belligerents and by denying passports as a means of keep Americans out of the danger zone.

In a statement issued yesterday, Nye said:

"I welcome the interest shown by the President at his press conference yesterday in the neutrality question. Keeping out of the wars of other nations should interest everyone and there is regret in the thought that the President does not feel this issue of sufficient importance to urge action on the neutrality question at this session of Congress.

"There is a large group in the Senate and in the House that feels the issue of such importance as to merit being here to see it through, no matter how long the session might run."

Mexican Revolt Under Control; Dictator Is Out

Students and Supporters of Garrido Still Stand by Arms.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, July 25.—A threatened uprising of armed Mexican peasants in Tamaulipas was reported under control tonight, but students and supporters of Tomas Garrido Canabal, ousted dictator of Tabasco state, still faced each other defiantly in Villa Hermosa.

Reports to the war department said the danger that the peon movement against Gov. Rafael Villarreal in Tamaulipas would turn into an armed revolt apparently had passed.

Some "slight possibility" that Villarreal could continue in office despite the peasants' complaints of aggression was seen after the governor conferred several hours last night at Tampico with Minister of Interior Barba Gonzalez.

Villarreal himself, who has maintained throughout he could handle the situation, reasserted his determination not to resign.

Reports from Tabasco, however, indicated the possibility of trouble there, even though Garrido had accepted "the severe test" involved in President Lazaro Cardenas' intervention to break his power over Tabasco and sent word to the executive that he wished him "to continue counting me among your friends."

15,000 Followers.

"Red Shirt" followers of the former political boss, officially estimated to number 15,000, confronted some 200 students, who have bitterly opposed Garrido, in Villa Hermosa, Tabasco capital, under the watchful eyes of the state's new military commanders.

A static peace continued as federal troops enforced strict orders against demonstrations, but more students slipped into Villa Hermosa to reinforce the garrison fortified in a house under military guard. Eighty Red Shirts yesterday deserted ranks to join the students.

Matamoros, Tamaulipas, Mexico, July 25 (AP).—The federal government maintained stern control in Matamoros tonight as more than 1,000 farmers and ranchmen seeking the resignation of Mayor Rafael Manguia became increasingly insistent in their demands.

Maintain Guard.

Armed with 30-30 rifles and six-shooters, the Agrarians, most of whom live in the nearby interior, maintained guard while their leaders conferred with Gen. Gabriel Cervera, commandant of the Matamoros garrison.

Mayor Manguia also conferred with Gen. Cervera, who, by moving troops from his small command into the city hall, displacing the regular police, was credited with preventing probable bloodshed last night after the Agrarians had threatened to invade the city.

Earlier reports that the Agrarians had dispersed proved only partially true. While some hundreds moved away, apparently for their homes, leaders said all were within easy call.

U. S. Acts to Block Soft-Coal Strike

Sec. Perkins, Lewis Confer; Guffey Bill Pressed.

By the Associated Press.

The Government moved on two fronts yesterday to head off the soft coal strike threatened for August 1.

Secretary Perkins held a long conference with John L. Lewis, president, and Philip Murray, vice president, of the United Mine Workers.

The White House was reported to have been assured that the Guffey stabilization bill will go from a sub-committee to the full House Ways and Means Committee early next week after being tied up in the sub-committee more than three weeks.

Appalachian operators and the mine workers seeking a new wage and hour contract met briefly but failed to produce any break in the four-month deadlock. The committee recessed until 2 p. m. today.

The operators then in caucus discussed—without any decision—whether the next contract should run to April 1, 1936, or April 1, 1937, and wage differentials within and between districts.

Britain Refuses To Send Arms To Combatants

Ethiopian women met in Addis Ababa to demonstrate their patriotism, while the Italian legation there ordered 46 Italians and some 400 Dodecanesian women and children, under Italian sovereignty, out of the country.

Ethiopia to Suffer.

Few in Britain believed the dispute could be settled peaceably, but the ban on arms exports was intended to call attention to Britain's efforts to avert war.

Responsible quarters recognized it would be detrimental to Ethiopia should war come, but Britain was said to be ready to reconsider the moment the council failed or an act on Italy's part interpreted as disregard of league obligations.

Meanwhile, Ethiopian representatives here pushed efforts to get both arms and credits. They were reported unsuccessful.

Italy, Ethiopia Send Notes of Accusation

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 25.—Ethiopia and Italy, facing war, sent notes to the League of Nations today in which each accused the other of responsibility for their relationship.

Ethiopia made an urgent request for a session of the League of Nations council and protested against Italy's preparation for war in East Africa.

Italy accused Ethiopia of responsibility for the breakdown of the joint conciliation commission which adjourned after failing to agree at a meeting in Scheveningen, The Netherlands.

In Rome it was stated that the Italian minister to Ethiopia had suggested to Emperor Haile Selassie that the conciliation commission sessions should be renewed.

Cites Interruption.

The contents of the Ethiopian note were not revealed immediately, but it was stated Ethiopia asked that the council discuss the Italo-Ethiopian dispute in its entirety.

Italy pointed out that this was the day the time limit expired for the work of the conciliation commission. It insisted the work at Scheveningen was interrupted "solely by the fact that the agent of the Ethiopian government put forth claims to be discussed at Scheveningen on questions excluded by the arbitration agreement."

League officials interpreted this as an allusion to the insistence by the Ethiopian legal expert on the discussion of the ownership of Ualual, the village where a hostile incident, resulting in several deaths, occurred last December.

The note said that the Italian government had instructed its minister to Addis Ababa of Italy's intention to proceed with conciliation efforts and to ask the Ethiopian government whether it intends to adhere to the arbitration agreement.

Italians Cheer War At Huge Mass Rally

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 25.—Rome rocked tonight to the refrain "Ethiopia for us" shouted from 100,000 Fascist throats as one of the greatest demonstrations in the capital's history gathered at Colonna and Venezia squares to roar approval of Benito Mussolini's African program.

A particularly frenzied shout swept through the enormous crowd when the Fascist secretary for Rome, Orazio Orazi, assured the crowd Italy would "be ready for war against blacks and yellows and, if necessary, blonds."

Previously the demonstrators had shoulted their opposition to Ethiopia and her alleged champion, Japan. The crowd took Orazi's mention of "blonds" to refer to Britain, also accused by Italians of interfering in Africa.

Fearing the demonstration would get out of hand, authorities threw heavy guards about the three foreign missions. Almost 1,000 carbinieri and regular troops surrounded the official residence of Nebradas Yesus, Ethiopian charge d'affaires. A doze carbineri and pain-clothes men stood about the British embassy, while 80 uniformed guards protected the Japanese legation.

Preparations Continue.

Meanwhile, preparations for possible hostilities continued. The steamer Conte Biancamano sailed from Naples with 1,950 soldiers, 150 officers and 600 workmen for East Africa. She will pick up 570 more troops at Messina tomorrow.

Shortly before the huge demonstration got under way Italy had expressed her willingness to resurrect the Italo-Ethiopian concilation commission.

Telegrams to that effect were sent to Addis Ababa, Geneva and other capitals after visits the British and French ambassadors paid separately to Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary for foreign affairs.

With Premier Benito Mussolini out of the city, his two young sons, Vittorio, 19, and Bruno, 17, were made officers in the East African air force. Vittorio was made a second lieutenant and Bruno a sergeant.

House, Senate Groups Locked On Holding Aid

Patton's Gift From Utility Leader Explained as Books or Cigars.

By James D. Secrest.

Senate and House conferees on the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company bill last night each appeared determined not to yield in their row over whether Administration aids should be allowed in the conference as congressional lobby committees turned their searchlights on Representatives and Senators in their double-barreled inquiry.

The conferees are scheduled to meet at 10 o'clock this morning to decide whether Benjamin Cohen, administrative legislative expert, and Dozier A. De Vane, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, will be permitted to remain at the executive parley.

Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama, who led the House conferees in objecting to the outsiders Wednesday, gave no indication of relenting, and stated he had practically the unanimous backing of House members in his stand, whether they voted for or against the "death clause."

Wheeler Hits "Poor Grace."

Late in the day Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, issued a statement which indicated he will not retreat in his insistence that the experts be allowed to remain at the conference.

"It comes with poor grace for any member of the Senate or House committee to object to the presence of a technical expert loaned by one of the Federal departments," he said.

"No member of the Senate committee would object to any member of the House committee bringing whomever he chose to the conference."

Senator Wheeler explained that Cohen had acted as a special clerk to the Senate committee and had assisted in drafting the bill and the amendments, both in committee and on the floor. He said he would not have issued a statement had Huddleston not talked to the press.

Mystery Box Explained.

Despite the introduction of an alleged lobbyist and hints at drinking and card parties, the House Rules Committee was unable to take the limelight away from the Senate Lobby Committee as the latter probed deeper into reports of the passing of a mysterious box between a Texas utility tycoon and a member of the House.

After calling back John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co., with the admonition to "refresh your memory," the Senate committee got two explanations of the newspaper-wrapped box that Carpenter could not recall Wednesday.

Carpenter disclosed that Representative Nat Patton (Democrat), of Texas, suggested recipient of the box, expressed the opinion that it was two Agriculture Department booklets on cattle and horses which Patton sent to John W. Carpenter, jr., the utility man's son.

Son Says It Was Cigars.

Another explanation came from the younger Carpenter by way of his father. That was that he himself had given Patton a box of his father's cigars at the Mayflower Hotel while they were planning a fishing trip. His mother had wrapped the cigar box in newspapers and tied it with a string.

As the Senate Lobby Committee obviously baited Patton, members of the House Rules Committee brought the names of several Senators into the inquiry in apparent retaliation. Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, declined to say whether the Senate committee would summon Patton, and the Texas Representative said he had no intention of going voluntarily before the inquiry and did not believe the committee would call him.

Bernard B. Robinson, of Chicago, who was billed in a press release from Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, as one of the outstanding lobbyists against the utility bill proved a disappointment as a sensation maker.

Smiling affably as he talked into the microphone which magnified his whisper into a shout, Robinson denied entertaining any members of Congress "any more than I usually do," with the idea of influencing their votes.

House committee members smiled when he mentioned casually that he had met several Senators on parties at which he was not the host.

Robinson then named Senators White (Republican), of Maine; Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina; Murray (Democrat), of Montana; Russell (Democrat), of Georgia; Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Dietrich (Democrat), of Illinois.

Dietrich was the author of the amendment, rejected by the Senate on a 1-vote margin, which would have eliminated the "death sentence" from the holding company bill.

"You entertained a good deal?" Cox asked.

"No more than usual," replied Robinson. "I only entertained my friends."

Cox then asked if it were not true that Robinson made a practice of losing money to members of Congress at parties in which drinking and cards offered the major amusements.

"No," said Robinson, "I always won."

Earlier the House committee heard Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Utility Investors, Chicago, disclose that his organization had spent $60,000 in the last six months in opposing certain legislation. He said $25,000 would be "a liberal estimate" of the amount spent fighting the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Sees "Slur" on Congress.

Dr. Magill ridiculed the implication that "a few hundred 'faked' telegrams had any influence in turning three-fifths of the Democrats in the House against the leadership of their President with his almost unlimited power." Such a charge, he said, "slurs the intelligence of the whole Seventy-fourth Congress."

Robinson, in answer to questions about his expense account, said he had spent $7,285, of which $6,400 came from the Associated Gas & Electric Co. He described himself as "a free-lance" lobbyist.

Compilations yesterday showed that Senate and House lobby inquiries to date have revealed expenditures aggregating $1,059,662 to oppose the utility bill. Of this, the Associated Gas & Electric Co. furnished $700,000 and the committee of public utility executives paid $300,000.

Joseph A. Warsham, vice president and general counsel of the Texas Power & Light Co., corroborated most of Carpenter's testimony regarding Patton's "social visits" at the Mayflower. He also revealed that he had called on Patton Wednesday afternoon, following Carpenter's appearance before the Senate committee, and yesterday morning.

After explaining Patton's version of the mysterious package, Warsham said he made a special trip yesterday to tell Patton of young Carpenter's story, phoned from Dallas.

When asked by Senate inquisitors what Patton's comment on the second version was, Warsham said:

"He didn't say anything."

Blanton Denies Pressure.

Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, went voluntarily before the Senate committee when it convened to deny ever having met Carpenter, who had previously said he had talked with every member of the Texas delegation except Representative Maverick and McFarlane.

He said the only utility man that had talked to him about the bill was an old friend, Robert W. Hainey, attorney for the West Texas Utility Co.

"And I took him out to lunch and to dinner and paid the check," Blanton said.

Tells of Lobbying With Liquor and prove the ruling's invalidity," he said.

"I don't mind going to jail or to hell," he said, "but I won't drive a cab from the yards to Decatur street for 30 cents."

Adolph Hohensee, union business manager, deplored the 12-hour day he said necessary for a cab driver to earn a bare living. He said the present cab rates represented a 75 per cent pay cut for the drivers.

"There are only two ways to settle this," he said. "By a strike or through the courts."

Knox Charges Plan to Weaken Supreme Court

ures he declared to be of doubtful constitutionaltiy in his address, Col. Knox said:

"I charge the President and his advisers with deliberately promoting the enactment of a group of laws which they have every reason to expect will be declared unconstitutional as soon as they reach the Supreme Court, and with doing so for the deliberate purpose of undermining the power and prestige of the Supreme Court and of precipitating attacks upon it in the hope that its unique power, as a coordinate branch in the American Government, to pass upon the constitutionality of laws enacted by the legislative branch, will be destroyed."

Talks of Export Bounty.

The publisher cited what he termed was the "annoyance" of Democrats to Republican criticism of the Administration program, and added:

"To Mr. Roosevelt's obviously sneering query, 'Well, what do you suggest as a substitute,' we might promptly and properly retort 'Why not try the program on which you were elected?'"

He declared the Democrats, instead of reducing Government expenses 25 per cent, have increased them 70 per cent.

After sharply criticizing the NRA and the principle of crop curtailment in agriculture, Col. Knox outlined a possible Republican program.

"In the first place, in any program of the Republican Party for 1936, must come that first essential of sound government anywhere—a balanced budget," he said.

"I believe no sound and permanent solution of the farmers' problem is possible without resort to a market for farm surplus commodities outside our borders," said Col. Knox, adding that science is opening up new fields for the use of agricultural products.

Until what he termed "longer-range remedies are given effect," Col. Knox asserted there "should be an export bounty on surplus crops shipped abroad."

June Industry Held Its Own, Reserve Says

Coal Production Spurred by Strike Threat; Sales Up in D. C. Stores.

Aside from coal mining, which was stimulated by strike threats, industrial production in June did no more than about hold its own, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday in its monthly business summary.

The board's industrial production index figure was 86 for June, compared with 87 in May and 84 in June, 1934. Adjusted for seasonal variations the index figure for industrial production in June was 86, compared with 85 for May.

Meanwhile, the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank reported that Washington department stores led the Fifth Reserve District in sales increases for both June and the first half of the year, as compared with corresponding periods in 1934.

Baltimore Sales Off.

Retail sales in Washington stores reporting to the Richmond bank increased 11.2 per cent last month over June, 1934. Retail sales in the first six months were 12.3 per cent greater than in the same period of last year. Stock turnover also was greater in Washington than in other cities in the reserve district covering this area.

Richmond stores reported retail sales in June 5.7 per cent greater than in June, 1934, but Baltimore stores reported a decrease of one-tenth of 1 per cent last month over the same month of last year. The gain in retail sales for the entire district was 5.5 per cent. The gain in retail sales for the district over the six-month period was 6 per cent.

The Reserve Board reported that factory production declined seasonally in June, while output of mines increased. The index figure for mineral production for June was 97, compared with 88 in May and 87 in June, 1934.

"Employment and pay rolls at factories showed more than seasonal declines," the board reported, adding there was little change in average level of wholesale prices, although a decrease occurred in retail food prices. Factory employment in June decreased from 81.1 to 79.7 per cent of the normal and pay rolls from 68.5 to 66.5.

Lumber in Increase.

Automobile production held up well, the index figure for that activity reaching 114 in June, compared with 108 in May and 92 in June a year ago. Adjusted for seasonal variations, the automobile production index figure for June was 100 or the average for the 1923-25 years. In May the adjusted index figure for automobile production was 86 and in June, 1934, it was 81.

Despite this increased production in the automobile industry, iron and steel production slumped in June, although no more than the usual seasonal decline. The unadjusted June index figure was 66 compared with 72 in May and 86 in June, 1934.

Lumber production also increased but activity at cotton mills, shoe factories and meat-packing establishments declined, the board asserted. Daily average loading of freight on railroads increased during June, but this, the board held, reflected larger shipments of coal as a precaution against the threatened bituminous coal strike.

Ten Key Positions in New Deal Await Presidential Appointees

By the Associated Press.

Ten key posts in the New Deal Administration are open to Presidential appointment.

Resignations, transfers, new laws and term expirations have given Mr. Roosevelt these jobs paying $8,000 a year or better, to pass out:

Assistant Secretary of Commerce, $8,000.

Assistant to the Attorney General, $9,000.

One Federal Trade commisioner, $10,000.

One Security and Exchange commissioner, $10,000.

One Interstate Commerce commissioner, $12,000.

Three Labor Relations Board members, $10,000 each.

Adjutant general of the Army, $8,000.

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce office was left vacant by the transfer of John Dickinson to the Justice Department as an Assistant Attorney General.

Harold M. Stephens was appointed to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday, after serving only three weeks as the Attorney General's right-hand-man. Indications are the office of assistant to the Attorney General may be filled from within the Justice Department.

The Federal Trade Commission, center of the Government's latest code-making activities, has had a vacancy since George C. Mathews resigned to join the Security and Exchange Commission.

The SEC, in turn, lost Ferdinand Pecora, who resigned to accept a New York State judgeship.

The Interstate Commerce Commission lost its chairman, Patrick Farrell, and has not had a commissioner appointed to replace him.

The three-man Labor Relations Board was created by the Wagner labor disputes law. When the security bill reaches the White House, three commissionerships will be open.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, present Chief of Staff of the Army, has been retained in office past his tour of duty, but on a basis regarded as temporary.

Senate Group Approves Bill Reviving Codes

Measure Would Regulate Conduct of Firms Dealing With Government.

By the Associated Press.

Imposition of NRA wage and hour regulations upon all industries dealing with the Government, or dealing with States or other subdivisions in business financed by Government money, is proposed in a bill approved yesterday by the Senate Labor Committee.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, said the aim was to require any industry bidding for Government business to comply not only to the extent of its Government business, but in all activities.

The committee action coincided with a statement by Attorney General Cummings that a uniform system for providing new codes under the skeleton NRA and Federal Trade Commission would be announced "soon."

The Senate bill was a complete redraft of a measure which Walsh said was asked by the President and which he introduced June 14.

Administration was vested in the President or any agency he delegated.

Penalty was piled on penalty for violation. Firms paying less than the NRA level were subject to fines equal to twice the difference between the code wages and the wages actually paid.

A fine of $10 a day would be imposed for each person under 16 years employed. To ward against the "kick back" of wages under which employes assertedly were compelled to reimburse their employer part of their wages as a means of "covering up" a sub-code level, the employer would be subject to a fine five times the amount of the kickback.

Elsie Janis to Recover From Auto Crash Hurts

East View, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Elsie Janis' physician said tonight the "sweetheart of the A. E. F." will recover without so much as a scar from the automobile accident in which she and her husband were injured last night.

Dr. C. W. Munger said after an X-ray examination her injuries consisted of a broken collar bone and cuts. She gave no evidence of a fractured skull after recovering from shock and was reported "coming along nicely." The actress' husband, Gilbert Wilson, was only slightly hurt.

Providence Chosen For Lions' Session

International Convention Elects Its Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, July 25.—The International Lions convention today selected Providence, R. I., as its 1936 meeting place.

Walter F. Dexter of Whittier, Calif., was elected third vice president and among directors chosen are John A. Lloyd, Portsmouth, Ohio; W. W. French, Mishawaka, Ind., and Earl J. Tanner, Eldorado, Kans.

The Denver Lions Club won the quartet singing contest. Wichita, Kans., was second and Providence, R. I., third.

For the 1936 meeting place voting was between Providence and Montreal after Atlantic City and Oakland, Calif., withdrew.

Formal sessions of the convention ended after the installation of officers elected last night, headed by new President Richard J. Osenbaugh, of Denver.

The new motor law concerns you on and after August 2nd. You should make yourself "financially responsible" In order to avoid the risk of losing your right to register and drive a car. The law is strict. The requirements are technical. You can learn exactly what they mean to you by reading a copy of the booklet, "Digest of Financial Responsibility Law of the District of Columbia", prepared for you by J. Borton Weeks, president of the Keystone Automobile Club. Copies are free on request.

The simple answer to the law is this: Your financial responsibility can be proved and your responsibilities will be met by insurance through the insurance facilities of the Keystone Automobile Club, Keystone Automobile Club Casualty Company and Keystone Automobile Club Fire Company stock companies with combined resources of $3,793,107.55. That insurance will be yours substantially at cost if you are a member of the club. No more economical or more satisfactory protection exists. As a member you will also be entitled to all the Club benefits listed on this page.

Investigate! Write or telephone today for your copy of the booklet, "Digest of Financial Responsibility Law of the District of Columbia". It costs you nothing. We're glad to send it.

THE LAW
On and after August 2nd, the law says that you must prove YOUR FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY in every case where you are...
1. In arrears for personal injury or property damage judgments above $100.
2. Guilty of driving under the influence of liquor.
3. Shown to have left an accident without making yourself known, or
4. Convicted in any state of a violation which if committed in the District of Columbia would require Financial Responsibility. Otherwise you will LOSE YOUR LICENSE

Virginia Road RepairContract Let in Fairfax

Widening to Begin Soon on Dangerous Stretch in County.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Work in connection with widening of the Richmond-Washington highway between Accotink and Fort Belvoir, in Fairfax County, will get under way within the next two weeks, according to officials of the Northern Virginia Construction Co., which was awarded the contract by the State highway department.

This is the final section of the highway between Alexandria and Fredericksburg which has not been widened to three-lane traffic. A number of serious accidents have occurred on this stretch since the remainder of the highway was closed several years ago.

An underpass on the Government railroad between Fort Belvoir and Accotink Station, which crosses the highway east of Accotink, also will be widened to take care of the new road. A number of local men will be employed on the project, which will be completed before cold weather.

Children under 16 years of age will not be permitted to attend the annual carnival sponsored by the School and Civic League and the Volunteer Fire Department of McLean, Va., which opens tomorrow night. Endeavoring to co-operate with the county health authorities to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis and not desiring to postpone the carnival, the committee in charge decided to take this action.

The joint committee from the two organizations in charge are Henry Huschke, John Payne and Theodore M. Coyner, of the league, and J. Clement Storm, Jesse Dailey and Hershell Wright, of the fire department, assisted by Harry Farver, Franklin S. Gicker, jr., and Floyd Gantt.

Huschke is general chairman and Farver financial manager and treasurer.

Those in charge of the various activities are John Payne, purchasing and supply; J. C. Storm, refreshments and soft drinks; F. S. Gicker, dancing and decorations; Mrs. A. M. Berthiaume, dinner; Hershell Wright, games; Jesse Dailey, construction; Lewis Magarity, electric wiring; T. M. Coyner, parking, and Elmer Guilford, automobile ticket sale.

The committee in charge of the supper on Saturday night and foods during the week nights includes Mrs. Grace Magarity, Mrs. Lewis Magarity, Mrs. John Hall, Mrs. J. L. Kefauver, Mrs. Jesse Dailey, Mrs. Clinton Florance, Mrs. Hershell Wright and Mrs. Stanley Smith.

A large outdoor pavilion has been erected for dancing. Wednesday evening a horseshoe pitching contest will be held, with a large silver cup as a prize. The carnival will continue through next week.

An old-fashioned tournament for professional and amateur knights will be held tomorrow, beginning at 1 p. m., at Huntmere, the farm of Joseph A. Wheeler, near Browns Chapel, Va.

The tournament is sponsored by the Colvin Run Citizens Association, and will be for the benefit of the Community Hall fund. As an added attraction two open jumping classes will be held. Judges will be E. H. Ford, of Fairfax, and Stewart Preece, of Vienna.

Judge Paul E. Brown will deliver the address to the professional knights and George E. Robey, of Fairfax, to the amateur knights. State Senator John W. Rust will deliver the coronation address. Marshals will be Miss Roberta Ayres, of Tysons Cross Roads, Va., and Miss Dorothy Gilbert Allen, of Washington.

The women of the Colvin Run Citizens Association will serve luncheon and refreshments. Secretaries of the event will be Mrs. Mathey Carper Hurst and Mrs. Sophie Myers Carper, of McLean.

The coronation dance will be held at 8 o'clock in the barn at Huntmere. This will be followed by round and square dancing.

Road Maintenance Activities Consolidated in Montgomery

Henry H. Nicoll Named Head of Unit Supplanting 3 Inspectors.

1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Road maintenance operations in Montgomery County were consolidated yesterday into a single unit following the appointment of the Rev. Henry H. Nicoll, of Kensington, as maintenance engineer of county roads.

Mr. Nicoll will operate under the Hyattsville office of the State roads commission as a county unit in District 3, headed by Edward G. Duncan. W. Windsor Hodges, of Dickerson, has been appointed as his assistant.

Mr. Nicoll announced yesterday that his office will have complete charge over maintenance of all Montgomery County roads, including State roads, dirt and secondary roads and lateral highways. He said that the creation of the Montgomery County unit is the first step in a new State plan to divide road work of Maryland into 23 county units. Mr. Nicoll replaces three county road inspectors—Thomas E. Shaw, Silver Spring; Andrew M. Neuman, Chevy Chae, and W. Frank Ricketts, Rockville, who supervised State road work in the county under the former setup.

The new maintenance engineer was born in Baltimore, but has lived in Montgomery County for the past 15 years. For the last two years he has made his home in Kensington with his wife, the former Mildred Warthen, member of a prominent Kensington family.

Mr. Nicoll has been engaged in general engineering work, especially along construction lines, for a number of years. During the World War he was assistant superintendent of Fort Humphreys under the Quartermaster Corps. Later he supervised construction work at Quantico, Va., under the Navy Department.

He also is an ordained minister and for several years was pastor of the Cedar Grove Baptist Church. He left the pulpit several years ago, however, to engage in the construction of homes in Kensington.

Mr. Nicoll and his assistant started their new activity yesterday by inspecting county road projects throughout the suburban areas, in the course of which they reduced the laboring force by approximately 50 workers. Mr. Nicoll said this was for economy purposes only and he has not formulated any definite policies with regard to personnel. Last night he was in conference with his brother, Benjamin Nicoll, of Lisbon, Md., who has been connected with State road work for the past 20 years.

Members of the executive and advisory committee of the Kensington (Md.) Chamber of Commerce will meet tonight with local officials to consider several public improvements being sought for the town of Kensington.

The meeting will be held at the home of Washington I. Cleveland, president of the chamber, and will consider the proposed overhead bridge elimination of the Kensington B. & O. Railroad crossing, extension of trunk sewers to Kensington and Garrett Park, stopping pollution of Rock Creek, extension of park drives through Kensington and improvements to the Jones Mill road.

MONT 2 24 V & B

County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, Emory H. Bogley, of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the park commission, will be present.

Eight new members were voted in at the meeting Wednesday night. They are Joseph O. Dean, William C. Slattery, I. C. I. Evans, William L. Busick, William E. Parker, Alfred D. Noyes and R. P. Moore.

The old Takoma Park, Md., pumping station on Mississippi avenue will be torn down, according to a statement made by Lacy Shaw, park commissioner of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to Vernon Brewster, chairman of the safety committee of the Sligo Park Hills (Md.) Citizens Association.

Because of its hazardous water tanks which have been for some time unprotected and dangerous to children playing about the place the Sligo Hills Citizens Association have been endeavoring to have the commission do away with the place for the safety of the children and also to enhance the beauty of the neighborhood.

Mr. Shaw in his statement to Mr. Brewster said that the cement tanks have been sealed up this week and that they would be barred until such time as they can be removed. The station will be torn down by relief workers after the harvesting season, according to Mr. Shaw.

Built in 1905 by the Town of Takoma Park to supply its residents with water, the old brick building was sold in 1915 to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission who used the place for four or five years then abandoned it. The Sligo Park Hills residents are so interested in its removal because it is situated almost on the boundary line of Takoma Park and Sligo Park Hills.

About a month ago the Maryland National Park and Planning Commission bought the property in order to improve that part of Sligo Creek Park. It is planned to utilize the brick building, which is part of the plant, as a Boy Scout cabin, Shaw said.

Roving dogs that prey on birds and small animals are the latest to feel the effects of the campaign of conservation being waged by the Rockville (Md.) Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America.

Before taking legal action to curb such dogs the league issued a warning through Dr. E. Russell Cook, of Bethesda, calling upon owners to co-operate by keeping their canine pets in check. Dr. Cook said that dogs are especially damaging to quail, pheasants and rabbits.

Health Officer Warns County Of Paralysis

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Candidates for the offices of treasurer, county clerk and the county board will address the voters of Cherrydale at a meeting tonight in the firemen's hall under auspices of the Cherrydale Citizens Association.

Charles T. Jesse, county treasurer, said last night that he was notified of the meeting for the first time yesterday morning. Prior to receiving the invitation to speak, he said, he had made other arrangements and he advised Julian Simpson, association president, that he would be out of the county tonight.

Harry A. Fellows, his opponent, will speak.

Other speakers will be Ralph E. Remington, Lyman M. Kelley, Chance Buchanan and C. B. Laycock, for county clerk; Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, William E. A. McShea, Leo Lloyd, Edward Dunean, George M. Yeatman, James C. Buchanan, C. W. Lee, Freeland F. Chew and Thomas R. Mechem.

Playground enrollment having reached the 2,000 mark, far exceeding expectations of the promoters, the county board and the school board, William Richardson, supervisor, last night announced that a banner will be presented Tuesday to the play center showing the most improvement.

Richardson said the banner will be awarded for a period of one week and a center winning it for four consecutive weeks will become its owner for the season.

The presentation will be made Tuesday afternoon by County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp.

The Arlington County Monarch Club will hold its weekly luncheon today at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, while disclaiming any attempt to frighten citizens of Arlington County, warns that there is no question but that an epidemic of infantile paralysis exists in the State of Virginia. At the present time it is most prevalent in the south central counties. There is only one case in this county now, he stated, and that does not necessarily mean that the epidemic has reached this section despite the fact it seems to be following the line of traffic.

Dr. Chichester says that younger members of a family are most apt to be attacked, but no one is exempt. Visits from relatives or friends from elsewhere should be limited, particularly from affected areas. There should be no visits made by any member of a household, especially to sections where the disease is prevalent. The strictest precautions should be observed, both at home and abroad, in use of eating and drinking utensils. Careful sterilization of dishes in the home should be observed.

In event that the Boy Scout Camp is opened between Highway and Memorial bridges, because of wide distribution of those attending, he advises Arlington Scouts not to attend.

Development of the disease in the county will mean that it has been brought in, and will not be because of any situation existing at present, he added.

Group Formed To Push Action On State Roads

Frederick County Citizens Elated Over Allotment for Route 7.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 25.—Their hopes raised by the allocation of $100,000 for construction on route 7, where a convict camp will be located, prominent citizens of Winchester and Frederick County announced today the organization of a "vigilance committee" to "obtain a definite program from the State highway commission relative to the completion of certain routes."

The committee, headed by W. M. Krise, president of the chamber of commerce, includes Andrew Bell, secretary; A. M. Field, city manager; R. Gray Williams, R. E. Buncutter, Peyton J. Marshall, Charles H. Harper, H. B. MacCormac, State Senator T. Russell Cather, Shirley Carter, W. Nelson Page, R. S. Smith, B. P. Harrison, Dr. R. B. Snapp, T. B. Patton and C. I. Brumback, chairman of the board of supervisors.

In a resolution the committee requests specifically the completion of routes 50, 7, 11 and 275, all important links in the primary highway system leading into West Virginia, where they connect with improved highways.

Members of the committee, gratified with the allocation to No. 7, which will provide a more direct route west to Pittsburgh and beyond, also expressed satisfaction with the tentative allocation for an overhead crossing for the Southern Railway on U. S. Route 11 at Strasburg, and $18,347 for use on municipal projects in Winchester. A $50,000 allocation to build an overhead crossing at Gaylord on the Norfolk & Western Railway in Clarke County, where two persons were killed recently, will eliminate another highway hazard in this section.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons
Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.
This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.
Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years.

Capitol Heights Beer License Plea Refused

New 'Request' Ordinance Blocks Ferguson's Beverage Plans.

Complying with the "request" that no more alcoholic beverage licenses be issued in Capitol Heights, Md., the Prince Georges County liquor commissioners yesterday refused to grant beer-selling privileges to Harry L. Ferguson, 200 Central avenue.

The "request" was an ordinance passed recently by the mayor and common council, forbidding issuance of any more beer, wine and liquor licenses.

Capitol Heights town officials, however, have no authority over the board of liquor commissioners, which is empowered by the State Legislature to issue licenses at its discretion. Hence the town ordinance becomes only a request in actual effect.

The board, holding its periodical meeting at Upper Marlboro, received no protests for the granting of a license for the Lord Calvert Inn at College Park. So sure were officials of the College Park Development Corporation, owners of the inn, that there would be protests, they asked for a continuance when it was found they could not have an attorney present. The hearing was set for August 8.

The inn has asked for an "on sale" license for the selling of beer, wine and liquor.

Another application for an "on sale" beer license, applied for by Presley H. Ward, of Fort Washington, likewise was deferred until August 8.

The board approved issuance of a license for "on sale" beer at the establishment of Mrs. Helen M. Knox, of near Piscataway, Md. A similar license was issued to Martha W. Pate, of near Fort Washington.

Thomas E. Underwood, of Accokeek, Md., and William W. Fisher, of Tuxedo, Md., both received "on sale" beer licenses.

9 More Stricken With Paralysis

Southampton Reports 1st Sign During Wave.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, July 25.—The State health department recorded nine new cases of infantile paralysis in Virginia today, bringing the total since June 1 to 225, of which 173 have been registered since July 1.

Southampton, which had not reported a case before, became the forty-second county to have poliomyetitis strike within its borders.

Other reports received today were from Albemarle, Brunswick, Buckingham, Danville City, Mecklenburg, Richmond City and Rockbridge.

While the number of reported cases has declined in the last two days, Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said the cases could be expected to fluctuate between seven and fifteen or more per day.

New Theater To Open Soon At Rockville

$100,000 Building Will Have 2 Stores, Cafe and Office Rooms.

The building, located on the site of historic Dixie Tavern, where every Governor of Maryland for more than 50 years until the Nice administration had registered, and where the State of Maryland charges that the Lyddane "murder plot" was hatched, is designed to harmonize with the courthouse and the Farmers Banking & Trust Co. Building on the same block.

Included in the plans are a modern air-cooled motion picture theater under management of Sidney B. Lust, well known Washington theater owner; a 26-by-90-foot store to house the new Rockville branch of the Peoples Drug Stores, and a 26-by-90-foot store in which a Sanitary Grocery Co. store will open; a restaurant in which a new motif is to be introduced, 14 office rooms and a parking lot to accommodate 300 automobiles.

The main building is expected to be open September 1 and the restaurant probably will open August 1.

The building, constructed at a cost of approximately $100,000 by Rufus E. Milor, Montgomery County builder, who is owner of the property, will have a white limestone front and will be surmounted by Neon signs which will illuminate the entire courthouse square. John J. Zink, of Baltimore, is architect.

The theater has been fireproofed and will seat approximately 750. The stage has been built with the idea of permitting expansion into a vaudeville stage if needed and the theater proper is reached through a 90-foot lobby which will be handsomely decorated.

Prince Georges Man Fined $50 In Gaming Case

Six Other Occupants of Gambling Place Have Effective Excuses.

The first conviction in Prince Georges County's recent series of gambling raids was obtained in the Capitol Heights (Md.) Police Court yesterday when Irwin Makle, colored, paid $50 for maintaining a gambling table.

Judge George B. Merrick decided that Makle, one of a party of six colored men arrested at an alleged gambling house in Fairmount Heights, was in charge of the gambling devices. Keys to the house were said to have been found on Makle's person.

Various excuses given by the other five men to explain what they were doing at the establishment at 2 a. m. were accepted by Judge Merrick as legitimate. Charges against them of maintaining a gambling table were dismissed. The men and their excuses are as follows:

Cockey Greenleaf and Ernest Brown, who said they were "up there to raise a fishing party;" Horace Newton, who went there to get his shoes shined; James Jackson, who "went up to get a drink of liquor," and Richard Simms, who did not know whether he was guilty or not.

The arrests were made by Sergt. A. W. Hepburn and Policeman Elon Turner, of the county police force, last Sunday morning. Turner, in company with Deputy Game Warden Frank Burroughs, later raided the Green Oak Country Club at Silver Hill.

During the raid Turner and Burroughs were severely beaten by occupants of the establishment. They arrested one man.

The two attaches of the track were arrested yesterday by local authorities at the resort town in a case to determine whether the option system of betting on the dog races constitutes a violation of State anti-gambling laws. A hearing has been set for next Tuesday.

Gov. Peery before the arrests showed a disposition to press a further investigation of activities at the track.

City Engineer H. G. McCartney has announced the contract for giving a surface treatment to approximately 17 miles of streets in Alexandria has been let to the Bituminous Service Co., of Westchester, Pa. The city engineer is expected to sign all necessary papers for the work during the week, and the work is scheduled to start within two weeks.

The streets will be given a treatment of crushed stone chips, with hot asphalt, and when rolled will give a roadway similar in appearance to an asphalt street.

The streets to be given this top dressing were given a preliminary gravel-and-sand base last year under City Manager E. C. Dunn, who was at that time the city engineer. They have been kept in good condition for this final top paving.

The work is a PWA project, the city to pay 70 per cent of the cost, with the remainder a grant from the Federal Government.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday that the Home Owners Loan Corporation made loans in Alexandria amounting to $1,143,000, to a total of 293 home owners. They paid taxes to the city amounting to $45,000 and, in addition, spent $14,000 for reconditioning.

Suspect Quizzed On Check Charge

Arlington Man Says Gunman Abducted Him.

George Hewett, of Arlington County, Va., held at the Upper Marlboro Jail in connection with his attempt to cash an $8,000 check at a Marlboro bank last Tuesday, was questioned yesterday by a Department of Justice agent.

Hewett's defense is that he and Homer King, a boarder at his Arlington County home, were held up Monday night as they were eating dinner and were carried by a lone gunman on a ride that lasted throughout the night.

Early in the morning, Hewett said, they reached the home of Oscar King, brother of Homer, at Piscataway, Md. There the gunman is said to have forced Homer to obtain his brother's bank book.

At the First National Bank of Southern Maryland at Upper Marlboro, Homer King and Hewett were allegedly forced to enter and attempt the check cashing. William S. Hill, cashier, became suspicious and called police. The gunman is said to have fled. King was not arrested.

Chapter XII.—When Four Were Not Guilty.

Nearly 50 years ago, a family of mixed backgrounds migrated from Louisa County, Iowa, into the gully-strewn, short-grass country of western Kansas. The soil was hard and baked. Nevertheless, here the Fleagle family settled and began a fight for subsistence.

There were four boys in this family. One was apparently normal in all respects; another was moronic, somnolent. The third and fourth brothers, however, were to play an important part in the Nation's fight against crime.

The Fleagle family was classed in the neighborhood as generally "shiftless," if it was classed at all. But somewhere in the background there may have been a degree of education. The mother gave hint of it by calling one of the characters of this recital Ralph Emerson Fleagle and the other William Harrison Fleagle; an essayist and a President were their namesakes. She failed to give them corresponding instincts.

Ralph Emerson Fleagle soon became plain Ralph. William Harrison Fleagle liked the nickname of Jake. Together they grew to manhood. At last Ralph and Jake left the hard scrabble farm; this was in 1910. Both were sullen, except when possessions came their way.

Ralph wandered East, working as a street-car man. Jake moved up and down the Sacramento Valley, taking part in the big crap games which followed the grape and other harvests. Finally he too moved East and soon learned other accomplishments. Police arrested him in Oklahoma on a charge of second-degree robbery. Conviction sent him to Oklahoma State Penitentiary for a year and a day. Then, at last, in the early 1920's, they came back to the vicinity of Garden City, Kans., and to the homestead.

This was the beginning of many mysterious trips. With each homeward trip they brought from $5,000 to $20,000 for deposit in the local banks. Mrs. Fleagle happily informed her neighbors that her boys, Ralph and Jake, had found a sure way of making money in the stock market.

Brothers Head Number Of Hold-Up Gangs.

Naturally, the mother did not know the truth. These sons of whom she was so proud now were the heads of a number of desperate hold-up gangs. It is believed that at one time these brothers, with the various gangs which they recruited, were responsible for nearly half the bank hold-ups in Kansas, as well as several train robberies in the State of California. They were suspected of none.

It was now 1928. Both had grown middle-aged in highly successful crime. Ralph was white-haired, Jake's face was lined from dissipation. Life at home became tiresome. The other brother and the father and mother asked incessant questions. The brothers decided to get a place of their own and leased a tract of land some distance away from home. This was to be a horse ranch, they said. Here they could hide themselves and their accomplices, here they could prepare more easily their private plans.

After much consideration, they decided the initial one should be that of the First National Bank of Lamar, Colo. They had "cased" it, knew that it was a heavy depository of funds, and believed they could rob it easily.

First they must have assistants. Jake Fleagle knew them: Howard Royston, who lived at San Andreas, Calif., and with whom Jake had worked before, and George Johnson Abshier, a former bootlegger of Grand Junction, Colo. Abshier and Royston were pals; this was their first really big job. They came to the horse ranch where, strangely enough, there was never a horse. The date was set for the robbery and they drove to Lamar.

They left their car at the curb and stepped into the bank, four masked men, each with revolvers or rifles. Hurriedly the officers and the patrons of the bank were lined up. A total of $218,000 was scooped into the bags. This done, the bandits began to back out of the building.

With that, A. N. Parrish, the aged president of the bank, leaped toward a concealed revolver, an old forty-five. For the first time in 15 years the gun was leveled and the trigger pulled; the bullet caught Royston in the jaw, breaking it in three places. Instantly the weapons of the bandits spat flame; Parrish literally died on his feet. J. N. Parrish rushed forward to aid his father. He too was shot down. Then, forcing Everett Kessinger, the assistant cashier, and E. A. Lungren, a bank teller, to accompany them, the bandits ran forth to their car and began their get-away.

Pursuit was almost immediate. The sheriff in a faster car began to overtake the heavily loaded bandit automobile. The gang shoved the cashier half out of the car — any stray bullet would kill him. When this did not halt the chase, the bandits cooly stopped their machine, got out, put their hostage in front of them for a shield and began to fire at the sheriff. They had rifles. The sheriff and his companion had only side-arms; nevertheless they stood game in the battle. At last a rifle bullet tore up the hood of the officer's car, breaking the spark plugs.

"That stops him," Ralph shouted. "Let's git goin'."

Lungren, the bank teller, was freeded here, and left standing in the road; he had been one too many in the car. Kessinger was carried on; there yet might be need of a hostage to act as a screen against law-enforcement bullets. Royston was groaning constantly with the pain of his wound. Abshier was insisting that they stop somewhere and even run the danger of capture to get medical aid.

"We'll get a doctor for him tonight," Jake answered. The racing car went on, deep into the gullied regions of western Kansas, and at last to the "horseless horse ranch." Here they bound Kessinger. Ralph and Jake hid the loot.

Night came. Jake and Ralph drove in to Dighton, Kans., to the home of Dr. W. W. Wieninger. Jake went to the door.

"I hate to ask this, especially on a bad night," he said. "Besides, you don't know me. But I've been referred to you. I live out of town here a piece and one of my boys got his foot crushed by a tractor. I can't bring him in very well. I was wondering——"

The doctor was reluctant to go. Jake argued.

"It's just out of town a ways. You can get right in the car with my brother and me."

"No, I'll drive my own car. Suppose you ride with me."

Ralph went ahead, leading the way. Jake sat beside the doctor.

"Perhaps you'd better raise that window," said the physician. Jake obeyed. The ratchet was loose—it was necessary for him to press against the glass with his hand. They reached the horseless horse ranch. The doctor entered the ramshackle house. He looked at the injured Royston and straightened, aware now of his danger.

"This man's been shot," he said, "and you're——"

He halted, staring into the muzzles of three guns.

"Treat that wound," the bandits commanded. The doctor obeyed.

A day later the search for the missing Dr. Wineinger began. They found him. One of the Fleagle gang had shot him in the back with a shotgun loaded with slugs and kicked his body into a gully, pushing his car after him. Before that was done, however, Ralph Emerson Fleagle had printed a scrawled note and stuck it into a pocket of the dead man's clothing. It read:

"Sweet revenge from Enterprise. Oh, you murderers, ye doctors!"

Shortly after this, Kessinger's body was found in a lonely shack near Liberal, Kans. He too had been bound and blindfolded and shot-gunned to death. Meanwhile, the Fleagles, Jake and Ralph, with their mother, whom they had invited to "take a little trip," were on the way to St. Paul in the Fleagle family car. Hidden there also were the bonds and negotiable securities resultant from the bank robbery, to be sold to the various bond and money fences who were plentiful in St. Paul at that time. In St. Paul they knew exactly where to go to find a hoodlum physician who would treat the gunshot wound, and a hide-out apartment where Royston could be secreted and where Abshier could nurse him back to health.

Dr. Wineinger's car had been wiped with an oiled rag to remove fingerprints before the bandits ran it into the ditch. Nevertheless, one spot had been missed—the place where Jake's finger had pressed against the pane in an effort to raise it. Here, R. S. Terwilliger, fingerprint expert of the Garden City Police Department, found a single print. He dusted, developed and photographed it, then sent the result to the Identification Unit at Washington for what he felt was a hopeless search.

Indeed, there was little to connect the death of Dr. Wineinger with the robbery of the Lamar bank. That note which had been scrawled by Ralph was accepted by most law-enforcement officers at its face value. Perhaps there was a double purpose in this note, escape plus revenge on a former teammate whom Ralph hated. Nevertheless, he evidently knew who would be suspected: Charles C. Clinton, a notorious outlaw. Clinton was a former preacher with an insane hatred for doctors, because his wife had died following an operation while he was in prison. A former preacher, it must be remembered, might use such a phrase as "Ye Doctors."

Many months passed. Arrests were made slowly. Clinton was caught in Kansas City. Whitey Walker, an Oklahoma bandit, was arrested in New York. Alfred Oliver, a former convict, was found in St. Louis. Floyd Jarrett, an Oklahoma outlaw, whose sister, Hazel Hudson, later married Wilbur Underhill, was apprehended in Oklahoma. All were returned to Lamar—and all were positively identified by citizens of Lamar as the four murderous bandits who had held up the bank.

Here was a perfect case of the mass hysteria which so often has been the cause of miscarriage of justice. These four men had absolutely nothing to do with the Lamar bank robbery. Yet there is little doubt that these identifications would have held as strongly at the trial. There could have been only one outcome—a verdict of guilty, with hanging sure to follow. That in itself would have been one sort of rank injustice. Only one eventuality intervened to prevent all this.

During all the months in which these men were being trailed down and arrested, the technicians of the Identification Unit in Washington searched in vain for the counterpart of that fingerprint found on the window of the murdered doctor's car. It must be explained that at this time a single fingerprint was worthless under the special demands of the Lamar case. In the first place, there were many officers who denied a connection between the murder of the doctor and the hold-up of the bank. Therefore, the fact that the print matched none of those from the fingers of the four arrested men proved only that they were not present when Dr. Wineinger was killed. It did not prove that these accused men were innocent of the hold-up. Further, at that time, no single fingerprint file existed; the significance of this will be explained in the next installment.

Neutrality And Taxes.

President Roosevelt's interest in neutrality legislation will be gratifying to the numerous Americans who believe that precautionary steps should be taken to keep this country out of any foreign war that may develop. Memories of the World War are still keen in the United States. Economic disasters which followed in the wake of that conflict are no less cogent in shaping public opinion. Now with threats of war in several quarters growing more serious, consideration of neutrality legislation becomes a clear-cut responsibility of the Administration.

On first thought there may be some dissatisfaction with the President's decision not to press for enactment of neutrality measures at this session. But when the nature of this proposed step is fully considered, the President's attitude appears wholly justified. To change a policy that has stood since the United States became a nation requires the most searching analysis. Moreover, any plan to preserve a neutral status in time of war must necessarily involve numerous ramifications. Few, if any, more complicated subjects have been considered by Congress in recent years.

Since Congress is in a state of agitation because of the extensive legislation already requested by the President, it would be unwise, not to say dangerous, to rush through a series of neutrality bills without exploring their implications. There is a grave question as to how far restrictions upon trade and travel must go to avoid complications that might lead to war. That issue can not be disposed of lightly. If neutrality legislation is going to be worth anything, it must be carefully worked out after full consideration of all the difficulties and impediments that may be encountered.

Congress would do well to advance the neutrality bills to the point of serious consideration during the remainder of the session. But if the policy is to be comprehensive enough to be effective, many weeks of debate may be required before final legislation can be properly shaped. In taking this reasonable attitude on the neutrality proposals, the President has unwittingly undermined his position on another vitally important measure before Congress—the tax bill.

Striking At Private Charity.

The President's emphatic disapproval of a proposal to exempt corporation gifts to charity from income taxation calls attention to the serious problems confronting various philanthropic organizations. The depression has made heavy inroads upon private endowment funds, reduced current contributions, and at the same time increased demands for aid, in spite of huge Federal outlays for relief.

With heavier taxes upon large corporations and large individual incomes in prospect, it is evident that private charities will find an important source of revenue further depleted by taxation. For that reason tax-exemption for corporate gifts appears to be essential if agencies of this sort are to continue in successful operation. The President's objections to such exemptions are really arguments in favor of complete cessation of corporate donations. Thus he argues that gifts are used to buy community "good will." And he thinks the practice should be frowned upon. At the same time he objects because stockholders are deprived of their right to decide what disposition shall be made of their money. This sudden solicitude for the interests of the individual stockholder stands out in striking contrast to a plan to impose graduated taxes upon corporate income merely for the sake of hitting at bigness.

Whatever the motives behind corporate gifts may be, their actual use is nearly always beneficial so long as they are not employed as a form of bribery. It is singularly inconsistent in any case to commend private charity and simultaneously denounce a system of giving that provides a substantial percentage of the funds needed to keep approved private agencies in operation. President Roosevelt's position is especially difficult to understand in view of his often expressed appreciation of the valuable and indispensable work done by private organizations, and his appeals for liberal support of them.

As spokesmen for the community chests contend, if the preventive programs now undertaken only by private agencies were abandoned, it would "eventually place upon public agencies enormous institutional bills for the care of delinquency and disease which might have been prevented." Consequently corporations as well as individuals are purchasing immunity from taxation, as well as showing appreciation of their responsibility to the community, when they contribute to worthy private charities.

The President lets his imagination run riot when he assumes that a modest degree of tax-exemption for corporate gifts would lead to dissipation of stockholders' money for purely sordid motives, with socially undesirable results. Even with the encouragement afforded by liberal exemptions, the tax burdens that will have to be borne by business are likely to force serious curtailment of sums donated to charity by private corporations.

Indignation Is Not Policy.

Every national government maintains a highly specialized agency to which is entrusted the conduct of its official relations with other countries. Whether that agency be called the ministry of foreign affairs, as is the customary title, or the Department of State, as the founders of the Republic selected in our own case, the function is identical. Within the broad lines of policy mapped by the Administration in power, it is the duty of this division to handle all matters affecting the nations which its government recognizes and with which it is at peace.

The reason for concentration of responsibility in this field is not far to seek. If elected legislators, always subject to organized political pressure, were entrusted with power in this field, chaos would inevitably arise. Governmental action pleasing to minority groups would soon be substituted for governmental action planned to accord with the best interests of the people as a whole. Such haphazard conduct of international relations would at best make any intelligent direction of foreign policy impossible. At worst it would cause ceaseless irritation and friction all too likely to result in wars.

It is, of course, entirely proper and desirable that in a democracy enlightened public opinion should be dominant in the direction, though not the technique, of international relations. Definite provisions of the Constitution, such as that requiring a two-thirds vote of the Senate for the approval of treaties, insure that the Congress shall be no sleeping partner in the case of American foreign policy. And none who has studied our diplomatic history can doubt the enormous influence of the popular will in guiding and determining the attitude which both the President and his Department of State assume in formulating the American attitude on every aspect of our international life.

Senator King and other congressional spokesmen are, therefore, entirely within their rights in voicing a detestation of Nazi methods which is shared by all thoughtful and liberty-loving Americans. So far as their presentation of the subject is well-informed, it will serve as a very desirable influence upon our official attitude towards the third Reich.

It is not, however, the business of any legislator to try to formulate the official American attitude by a resolution which discreetly or indiscreetly seeks to sever diplomatic relations with Germany or any other country. If the time should come when such a resolution seemed nationally and internationally helpful, the Administration, with full responsibility for its action, will itself give the lead to Congress. Until such a lead is given by the Department of State, congressional intervention in this field is more likely to be productive of bitter domestic and international bad feeling than of any constructive end.

Senator King's failure to understand just why we have a Department of State is shared by Mayor LaGuardia of New York. This elected municipal officer would have avoided a very unfortunate blunder if he had taken the pains to consult with our diplomatic technicians before taking action against a German masseur which is of such questionable legality that it threatens to become an international incident. There is a right way and a wrong way to exhibit disgust at foreign practices which are repugnant to the standards which civilization has so laboriously built up. And the sad stupidity of choosing the wrong way is that it offers the offender a legitimate grievance with which he can obscure the deeper issues.

It would be a sorry day for the United States if its citizens, of whatever creed or color, should cease to feel and exhibit moral indignation at cruelties, persecutions and tyranny, whenever found. But it would be an even worse day for this country if the impulsive actions of elected officers should ever supersede a calm, deliberate and well-rounded technical direction of foreign policy. To secure such policy is the high duty and the grave responsibility of the Department of State. Representative Blanton did well to emphasize that fact on the floor of the House yesterday.

Stop-Gap Regulation.

A challenge to the authority of the Public Utilities Commission to fix rates and zones for the operation of taxicabs was inevitable. Washington's cab drivers have been free from legal restraints for so long that they could scarcely be expected to submit voluntarily to new rules. Especially is that true when the legality of the regulations is questionable and their inadequacy is unquestionable.

The P. U. C. recognizes its order as a stop-gap arrangement. It has gone as far toward regulation of the taxicab business as Congress will permit. Beyond reach of its present authority, however, abuses in the sale of cabs and in the relations of drivers to cab owners still exist. The informed public cannot help sympathizing with the protests of cabmen against these conditions.

Moreover, there is danger that the current attempt at regulation will be completely broken down through court action. The courts have already held that the zone system of fixing charges is discriminatory. Even though Congress has sanctioned regulation of this sort the P. U. C. may find itself without authority to enforce its orders.

Such are the results of congressional interference with quasi-judicial regulatory functions. To save its own members a few dollars in taxicab fares Congress has completely deranged this local public utility. No permanent solution of the consequent muddle can be expected until Congress passes a bill restoring to the P. U. C. full power to regulate the cab business in the public interest.

Lobbying In Conference.

Three of the House conferees on the holding company bill properly refused to participate in a closed executive session at which two Government lawyers who had helped to draft the Senate bill containing the "death sentence" clause were present. Representative Huddleston, one of the protestants, says it is "just a case of the Administration trying to lobby the conference" which is "as manifestly improper as it would be to have utility lobbyists present." Such objections cannot be overruled by pretending that the expert advice and information needed to draft a conference bill can only be given by those who framed the original measure.

The business of a conference committee is to harmonize conflicting provisions of House and Senate bills without outside interference. The Administration's practice of presenting Congress with made-to-order legislative proposals and then using its lawyer draftsmen to capture votes for sponsored measures has already led to grave abuses. That fact has been brought out in the course of the House inquiry into lobbying. To permit these same prejudiced spokesmen or their aids to carry on the work of shaping important bills in conference would be a particularly flagrant example of executive interference with legislative functions.

Expert assistance is required, of course, to draft bills in proper form after decisions have been reached in conference. But the experts so employed ought to be acceptable to all the conferees and free from any suspicion of bias. In the present instance, it is impossible to believe that individuals who have played an active role in drafting the Senate holding company bill would confine their efforts in a conference session to passive execution of orders, and scrupulously refrain from attempts to influence the conferees' decisions.

Representative Huddleston and his two colleagues have performed a public service by rebelling against this attempt of Administration supporters to invade the privacy of the conference room in the guise of expert advisers.

The World Is A Stage.

William Gillette, who breathed life into Conan Doyle's mental picture of a master detective by his portrayal of him on the stage, yesterday reached 80 years of age. Dramatic as ever in appearance and as succinct in expression, he stoutly refused to be interviewed while passing his birthday in New York City. Gillette, like Maude Adams, is one of the few who have consistently followed the policy of denying the public glimpses of their private lives through the press.

However, enough has been learned of how he passes his retirement to delight not only his admirers, but everyone who feels nostalgia for unrealized childhood ambitions. Not in gloomy reveries invoked by musty tomes are his long, leisurely hours spent. Nor is his mind wholly employed with triumphant memories of the years when he held audiences spellbound as "Sherlock Holmes." This grand old man of the theater has assumed a totally different role, and his stage occupies over three miles of miniature rails on his estate. Here he dons an engineer's cap and drives a small locomotive over bridges and through tunnels which have been placed at intervals along the line.

There is something infinitely splendid about a man who decides what he wants out of life and then sets about getting it, even though the line of endeavor may appear ludicrous and without reason to others. Gillette, as a boy, defied his father and possible ridicule by going on the stage. Now at an age when most men face the grim realities of settling down to await death, he opens the throttle of his engine and speeds along, enjoying life. Not only is it a grand gesture of a grand actor, but it also furnishes a stimulating thought for men in every walk of life, many of whom do not know how to get the most out of the part they are playing.

Arms For North Africa.

From the Kansas City Star.

The prospect of war between Italy and Ethiopia finds several measures pending in Congress that would permit President Roosevelt to proclaim an embargo on shipment of arms to the belligerents in such a conflict, but with no legal authority as yet granted for that purpose. It is true that by a joint resolution adopted in 1922 Congress empowered the President to prevent the export of arms to certain countries beset by internal violence. But this authority does not cover international conflicts nor does it extend beyond the American continents and a few other countries where the United States claims to possess special rights.

As matters now stand, if the President is to prohibit the sale of arms to Italy and Ethiopia, Congress must adopt a special resolution to that effect, as it did last year in the case of the war between Bolivia and Paraguay. It is significant that Ethiopia has already protested to several European governments that private firms abroad were declining to sell war material to its agents.

Sailing In Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After observing a couple of letters from Post readers rooting for increased yachting facilities for this locality I am tempted to add my weight to the boat with a few yowls and squawks.

First of all, by "yachting facilities" we mean (1) water in which to sail or float boats; (2) adequate landing and storage places. Of the first we have ample, a mere 100 miles of Potomac River for a starter and then, of course, the Chesapeake and a matter of 3,000 miles or so of navigable tributaries. Of the second we are nearly entirely without, those such as we have being overcrowded, in poor condition, badly located and inefficiently administrated. This condition is due almost entirely to lack of competition among those operating such places, a scarcity of sites accounting for this, also the impossibility of attaining a leasehold on a site that would warrant the creation of a worthwhile plant.

To correct a popular impression, "yachts" and "yachting" are not the playthings and sport of the very wealthy only—as some of our hay-shaker Congressmen like to insist.

A small boat—comet class, snipe, etc.—can be purchased new for not more than $150; used, anywhere from $50 up. International star class craft can be purchased for as low as $150, used. Home builders shade these prices plenty, besides having the fun of construction. Some of the lads sail boats that cost them less than the price of a good pair of golf pants and a box of tees, yet the amount of skill and ability involved is much greater than that needed to pilot a large, clumsy houseboat of a "yacht" that costs $10,000.

My research department informs me that sailing has leaped a little over 1,000 per cent in three years, which is quite some leap. Now, should the lads in the manual training courses at the high schools get busy during the winter to come and compose, say, five comets per school, we would see some fine interscholastic meets that would busy far more of the lads (and gals, too) than the much touted football teams and probably foster a much greater spirit of competition.

There are some right nifty events held hereabouts—at St. Michaels, on the Eastern Shore (with lots of Washingtonians present), is annually held a very fine regatta, what with sail and powerboat racing and the only thing of its kind in the world, that of racing and perpetuating the famous log sailing canoes. Then the Gibson Island Yacht Squadron has a race every three years—New London to Gibson Island—in which the finest sailing craft in the world competes. Then over the Labor Day holiday there's a 100-mile event that calls out 25 or 30 starters, and other races throughout the summer and fall. The Maryland Yacht Club joins in with an 80-mile sail, the Hampton (Va.) Club indulges itself in a 150-mile spin. And the Potomac River Sailing Association produces the most difficult event of all, the 35-mile wriggle down to Quantico in small craft.

Sailing is the coming thing and you might as well lay aft on the mainsheet now and give it a haul.

Hughes And Hoffman?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me, as one of the rank and file of the Republican Party, to suggest as the one outstanding man to lead the party to victory next year the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes. Doubtless much pressure would have to be exerted to induce him to run. He would have to make a great sacrifice, but in these hours of doubt and stress, would it not be worth while for him to answer the call of his fellow citizens and assume a leadership that would mean the salvation of his country and its Constitution?

It is my firm belief that he would have the united support of Republicans and true Democrats alike. As a running mate, who would be more fit than the present Governor of New Jersey, the Hon. Harold G. Hoffman. Certainly such a combination would restore the confidence of the Nation, which has been badly shattered by the present radical departures from all that is safe, sane and sound in the way of government.

R. SEABURY D'ESPARD.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations in securing Westbrook Pegler's articles for The Post. He is the foremost columnist of today. I spent two months in New York this spring and read his column every evening. They were so excellent I cut them out and brought them home with me—too good to waste.

MACON S. ROWE.
Fredericksburg, Va., July 24.

No Adjournment Pressure Applied.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This letter is occasioned by the recent questionnaire sent out by The Post canvassing the wishes of members of Congress regarding the adjournment of Congress.

Allow me to preface my remarks by saying that I am a constant reader of The Post and that I have a very considerable admiration for your paper, the quality of its editorials generally, the accuracy and fairness of its news columns, and for what I believe to be the integrity of its purposes.

I think, however, you somewhat misunderstand the feeling in Congress regarding adjournment and the wishes of the members about its program of work remaining to be done, and that you did not correctly interpret the recent resolution for adjournment and the vote thereon in the House of Representatives. When the resolution for adjournment was offered a few days ago, there was prolonged applause from the Republican side of the House, which applause was joined in by a very few Democrats. Most of the newspapers represented this occurrence as a manifestation of unanimous approval of the resolution. This was incorrect.

Most of the newspapers were so unfair as to claim that the overwhelming defeat of the adjournment resolution was brought about by Administration pressure. This is not only untrue, but was very unfair because it ascribed improper or dishonest motives to practically every member of Congress who voted against the resolution. Neither an individual nor a newspaper has a right to impute improper or lower or unworthy motives to anyone without proof.

I am not one of the leaders in the House and I am writing because I think my case is fairly typical of the majority of the Democratic members and that I am in a position to know the sentiment and wishes and motives of a majority of the Democrats. No one, either representing the Administration or the leadership of the House, said a word to me about how I should vote on this resolution. I have talked with at least 50 other members and can say the same thing with respect to them.

Of course, all of us would like to be home. I left home the 27th of December and have not been back there since, and, in fact, very seldom leave Washington and never during the time when the House is in session. Being in my second term I am not in the position of leadership, but I am one of the many hard-working members who have some conscience and sense of duty and responsibility which leads me to the inevitable conclusion that it is our duty to stay here until we finish the job.

There are, of course, a few members, most of whom I never heard of either in committee work or in debates on the floor, who repeat in copybook fashion the frequently uttered bromidic statements which emanate from certain newspapers that "it would be better if Congress would adjourn and go home and let the country settle down." The leaders in both bodies of the Congress, such men as Speaker Byrns, Chairman of the Rules Committee John J. O'Connor and others, as well as the hard-working members who, like myself, are supporting them, know better than this. We know that until such legislation as that providing for social and economic security, the reform of the banking system, the proper regulation of the utility holding companies, the proper regulation of interstate transportation, the TVA bill, the revision of the AAA, the formulation of a broader tax program, and other important legislative measures have been completed, we have not finished our job and we have no moral right to adjourn.

As Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, one of the ablest and most respected members of Congress said regarding this: "If we go home and leave our job unfinished here, we will find it a lot hotter at home than we do in Washington." I think he correctly stated the temper of the country, though not perhaps of the bankers and certain other selfish interests who do not want to be interfered with. It is far better for business and the country in general to get whatever benefit may be derived from these measures, as well as to know definitley what the legislation is, than to be left in a state of uncertainty until next year.

No one is applying pressure, either on me or, to the best of my belief, any other member of Congress to get him to do his duty. In my opinion the men who, in the face of this situation, are urging adjournment without finishing the job, are slackers, and let me repeat again, they are not men who are doing the serious work on the floor of the House of Representatives, or in any of the committees.

Art for Art's Sake.

Post Office, Friday.

THIS plan for a monument to Whistler, to be paid for by subscriptions raised on Mother's Day, 1936—subscriptions put down by admirers of his portrait of his mother, or by admirers of Mr. Farley's postage stamp of Whistler's portrait of Whistler's mother; there is surely one spirit in the undiscovered country which won't be pleased with it.

That is the shade of James Abbott M'Neill Whistler.

What wouldn't his damnable tongue of his have said about the memorial?

* * *

Judith Kent studied with him just after her marriage and remained on terms of intimate irony with him until his death in 1903. Only last evening she was retelling a lot of old Whistler stories. Some of her collection have escaped the books on Whistler that we have read; one or two are from his own lips or own pen. But even the least authentic is admirably Whistlerian.

* * *

Rossetti showed Whistler a sketch. "And I have written a sonnet on the same subject," said the Pre-raphaelite.

"Rossetti," said Whistler, "take the picture out of the frame and put the sonnet in."

* * *

It was a Scotch delegation that negotiated for the painting of Whistler's portrait of Carlyle. How much would he charge? What? A thousand guineas?

"That's a braw price, Mr. Whistler," the spokesman complained; "a braw price for a modern picture. The coolers in modern pictures fade, mon—they fade!"

"No, my dear sir; you are mistaken," Whistler replied sadly; "the colors in modern pictures do not fade—and therein lies their damnation."

* * *

He was once on good terms with William Chase, but when, long later, his sister remarked that Chase "amuses James," James protested: "Oh, rarely, rarely!" He was once even tolerant of his brother-in-law—though "a brother-in-law," he remarked, "is not a connection calling for sentiment"—yet a day arrived when that personage left a room on finding Whistler there.

"He just came in for his morning bitters," smiled James M'Neill.

* * *

Whistler's unsuccessful campaign for re-election to the presidency of the Royal Society of British Artists will never be forgotten by any member thereof who survives to this epoch. Somebody told Whistler that one of his supporters had resigned. "Ah, the early rat," murmured Whistler—and, when there was no longer any blinking the fact of defeat, "No longer can it be said that I am the right man in the wrong place."

He left the society, but returned to mock at one of its exhibitions. A visitor stood there admiring something or other by Leighton:

"It's a gem—a perfect gem!"

Said Whistler: "Like a diamond in the sty."

* * *

Over the door of a house that he had to give up he placed this inscription:

"Except the Lord build the house their labor is but vain that built it. E. W. Godwin, F. S. A., built this one."

* * *

Nor did Whistler depend entirely upon his wits for defense or attack. In the Hogarth Club, a certain Mr. Stott, of Oldham, called him a coward:

"I immediately," wrote Whistler, "rose up and slapped Mr. Stott's face. I am also grieved to add that the incident closed by a kick administered upon a part of Mr. Stott of Oldham's body that finally turned toward me."

* * *

It was only a year before his death that he wrote:

"I learn that I have, lurking in London, still a friend, though for the life of me I can not remember his name."

And it was in the same mood that he said, on learning of the death of Tom Taylor:

But the monument—and the postage stamp?

"Art should be independent of all claptrap," Whistler declared—"should stand alone and appeal to the artistic sense of the eye or ear, without confounding this with emotions entirely foreign to it, as devotion, pity, love, patriotism and the like. All these have no kind of concern with it."

Of course, that bars much music and most poetry from the realm of art—not to mention a bit of Whistler's own painting, some of which deserves barring. But so he declared, anyhow.

He said: "Take the picture of my mother, exhibited . . . as an 'Arrangement in Gray and Black'. Now, that is what it is. To me it is interesting as a picture of my mother; but what can or ought the public to care about the identity of the portrait? It must stand or fall on its own merits as an arrangement."

* * *

On what merits did the purple postage stamp stand? And by what demerits will the monument fall?

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

NOW that the battle's over your correspondent is pleased to recall that the burning issue three years ago was—prohibition.

• • • •

Recalling the sweaty, noisy, incredibly trashy scenes amid which the people's choices were determined by two great congresses of low-grade political job holders and job seekers in Chicago three years ago, I would revive for your attention the fact that the citizens at that time were divided on just one issue.

That was not recovery or the Constitution, but prohibition. But, although big and little banks had been popping all over the land for a long time like an endless string of firecrackers, the question before the delegates and the country was just what the conventions would do about liquor.

Bishop Cannon was there, a little the worse for the rough-and-tumble of politics by this time, but as practical and arrogant as ever, and with him was the entire strong-arm squad from his Methodist vatican in Washington. These drys included the Rev. Dr. Ernest Cherrington, F. Scott McBride, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn; the Rev. William Sheafe Chase, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Boston and Florida, and Col. Raymond Robbins, the vanishing crusader.

PARADE of the specters toward "Exit."

These are all forgotten terrors now, but in their prime they constituted the most fearsome gang that ever haunted the dreams of a President. So mighty and bold they were that Mr. Hoover, not long before, had even forbidden the time-honored bridge, formerly pinochle game, in the reporters' room at the White House lest one of these pious but determined men or women should come upon the boys and receive the impression that the sacred heritage had become a gambling hell.

Mr. Hoover, on mounting the throne, had promised to investigate the whole problem of prohibition and abide by the findings of his commission and then had repudiated those findings when they disagreed with his conception of political expendiency. That this conception of political expediency was a wrong guess was his own hard luck and that of his party, for the resentment only gained in fury and he was doomed on a cheap, superficial issue.

That Mr. Roosevelt, in his turn, has repudiated airily and with amazing cynicism the promise in his own platform to curtail the vast bureaucracy which he condemned in Mr. Hoover's administration may be conceded without affecting the case.

VIOLENCE at turn of the tide.

At the time of the last conventions the country had been harassed and bullied for 13 years by succeeding waves of thieves and ecclesiastical bull-dozers, a member of the United States Senate had been shot through the head by a prohibition agent firing at a suspect in the streets of Washington, and as the most brutal spectacle of the whole gory horror the House of Representatives had risen, almost en masse, one day to cheer the news that an innocent 17-year-old country boy, hitch-hiking in a bootlegger's car, had been shot dead by a prohibition cop. That savage outburst marked the turn.

To be sure, as at all national conventions during prohibition, many of the delegates who advanced on Chicago to vote dry managed to get slobbering drunk and maintained that happy and characteristic state for days and the bootlegger pursued his rounds in the hotels where they were stabled without molestation. A greasy dive across the street from the convention hall did business with the Republicans as long as they were in town, but was raided with great vigor when the Democrats gathered for their own orgy. This persecution, exceeding the bounds of a civilized political warfare, only made the Democrats madder.

WELL, anyhow, repeal is here.

The Republicans knocked Mr. Hoover on the head when they adopted their yes-and-no declaration on prohibition, thus inviting the Democrats to go all the way in theirs, as they subsequently did amid frantic cheers from the delegates, including a large number who had been dry as long as there was money in it. For it should be remembered that the delegates who vote on the presidential nominees and platforms are among the lowest forms of insect life known to science and the greatest shame of the republican form of government as practiced in America.

In order to deliver repeal as he had promised, Mr. Roosevelt was forced to bribe some of the several States with public funds after his election, but they would have got the money, anyway, later on, so at least he received something for his investment. The nonsense about the billion dollars a year in Federal revenue from liquor had been forgotten along with the harmless foolishness about economy in government. Were the Democrats fighting for election only to deprive themselves of the loot by literal fidelity to a campaign slogan?

But repeal is here. Mr. Hoover is gone because he couldn't call the turn. Cannon, Cherrington, McBride, Mrs. Boole, Mrs. Peabody, Chase and Robbins—all are gone, the old familiar furies. Brewery trucks roll through the streets, whisky and gin stand side by side with oatmeal and soap on the grocer's shelves, and at night the electric lights spell out in proud, wicked defiance the long-forbidden word, "Saloon."

Seer Warns Roosevelt

By the United Press.

Hoboken, N. J., July 25.—The life of President Roosevelt will be in jeopardy for the next three weeks, Prof. Gustave Meyer, "scientific astrologer" forecast tonight.

The professor, who modestly admits he "put the city of Hoboken on the map" when he named the "exact time" of President McKinley's assassination, said Mr. Roosevelt should guard against "misfortune, serious accident or operation, if not fanatics or assassination" from July 29 to August 16.

Prof. Myer, after further consultation with the stars, reported the following:

1. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh should avoid aviation during the above mentioned period because of a "most unusual amount" of serious mishaps to aviation and automobiles.

2. Devastating storms, floods, seismic disturbances and earthquakes will occur in the United States and Europe.

3. On July 29, 30 and 31, "People will think hell is loose with the lid off, so to speak."

The Riches Of The Starrs

Lewis Street Thrown In Uproar As Possibility Of Million (Or Hundred Million) Dollar Fortune Looms For Ironworker; Latvian Porter Wins With Prize Flower Display.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

IN one of the current comic strips a couple of American boys find a diamond mine and come in for what the old-fashioned novel used to call "untold riches"—probably because you were never told just how much. Matters do not have to be disposed of in a particularly realistic manner in a comic strip, but they are supposed to be a little more plausible in life itself. Nevertheless, one New York family—that of Abraham Starr, a poor ironworker of Lewis street, down under the Williamsburg Bridge—is living under circumstances as weird, as unplausible and as romantic as those of the comic strip.

The Starrs have both the diamond mine and the untold riches. At least they think they have, and the neighbors, echoing happy cries of "Mazel Tov!" which is Yiddish for "Good luck!" think so, too. The fortune, which in current reports runs anywhere from 1,000,000 to a 100,000,000, has not yet been definitely traced to the end of the rainbow, and, in fact, seems to grow a little vaguer with every day that passes. But that may be just as well, for the Starrs are now engaged in spending it with a lavish hand—for trips to Palestine, for two-family houses down on Long Island, for charity and for what not. Cynics are beginning to feel that they had better save some of it while the saving is good.

IT ALL came about in this fashion. Abraham Starr was born 57 years ago in Bialystok, Poland, under the name of Staraselsky. When he was a child, his mother, with four of her five brothers came to Montreal. The fifth brother, little Abraham's uncle, went to South Africa where, under the name of Harry Koslak, he prospered—and how! In partnership with another man he is supposed to have acquired a diamond mine and to have traded in the fine blue-white stones until his estate mounted to $17,000,000. Six years ago he died, leaving a will under which his only sister, Abraham Starr's mother, was to receive $6,000,000.

Anyway, the Starrs, neither the Starrs in Montreal nor the Starrs in New York, where nature has provided some 34 planets from the original Starrs, knew anything about all this. Finally, however, someone ran across an ad in a newspaper of Bialystek referring to the estate of Harry Keslak and seeking information about the Staraselskys. This item drifted to Montreal and thence to New York. The Starrs believe they are the people advertised for and Abraham Starr has hired lawyers in this city to follow up his claim. So far the attorneys have made no progress whatever and nobody in Capetown, way off on the other side of the world, seems to know a thing about the Keslak fortune. However, South Africa is quite a sizable section of land. It is quite possible that New York lawyers, for example, wouldn't know off-hand, about a $17,000,000 estate in Rawhide, Idaho.

The news came out first in the Montreal papers and the Starrs up there are having just as much of a to-do about it as the Starrs down here. In the beginning, Abraham Starr, who has worked pretty hard all his life making ornamental iron, kept quiet about his potential fortune. When the news hit Lewis street he still maintained a reasonable balance. "I go to work, anyway," he said, "Until I get the cash." But these kisses from fate are as demoralizing as those of the Irish sweepstakes. The more difficulty his lawyers have in tracing the fortune, the more Abraham is convinced that they will succeed.

HE IS telling the world about it now, over the radio. And, of course, the children and the grandchildren have simply gone off the deep end. They are one and all sure that the money is just around the corner. The only thing which is actually just around the corner are hordes and hordes of the Lewis street neighbors, one and all trying to get into the Starr domicile to congratulate the whole menage. It seems to be something like touching the back of a humpback.

But Mama Starr has kept her head. Leah Starr, patient and workworm, seems to have found detachment from the gold fever.

"For three nights, now," she sighed, "I have had no sleep. I do not dream of gold or of millions. It will be time enough to count the money when it is in our hands. That does not bother me now. It is this rush and excitement.

"All this babbling, this craziness. And the men with the talking picture machines and their lights. They make my head tick all night. This morning when I came back from market, the whole street is black with people. They are hanging from our windows and my heart jumps. I think to myself, 'a child is run over.' But it is just the neighbors.

"Millions or no millions, I want there should be peace here."

MEANWHILE, Peter Pedneek, who comes from Latvia and is a porter in Radio City, has made himself a kind of fortune from the rubbish discarded by others.

Up in Horticulture Hall of Rockefeller Center they recently held a flower show. When it was getting under way many of the exhibits were discarded as unworthy of being shown. They were cast on the rubbish heap and rescued therefrom by Peter Pedneek, who took them all up to his home in the Bronx. There, in the backyard, he tenderly nursed them back to health and bloom. "You can think of flowers as human beings," the porter said. "They are your friends." Then Peter had an idea.

He actually had the nerve to enter Class 12 of the contest for "luncheon table decoration using any outdoor flowers with service for six people." For his exhibit Peter arranged a large table, set with six wooden plates and wooden salt and pepper shakers on a tan linen tablecloth. In the center, in a comfortable wooden bowl, he placed a natural array of hollyhocks, rose phlox and blue delphiniums—all of them cast-offs by less imaginative exhibitors. One of the judges stopped before Peter's exhibit and exclaimed: "That is the most remarkable thing; it's beautiful!"

Peter's table won first prize.

ALWAYS there is that old question about how much wood could a woodchuck chuck, if a woodchuck could chuck wood. But the burning question around New York just now seems to be how far a caddy can carry a golf bag and for how much.

The boys of the Dyker Beach Park course started it by going on strike for a dollar for 18 holes and seventy-five cents for nine holes. They were laughed at at first, but they clearly meant business and now the unrest has spread to other city golf courses and even over into New Jersey. Great oaks from little acorns and so on, for now Robert Moses, dynamic park commissioner, bearder of Mayor LaGuardia and vanquisher of Secretary Ickes, has been thrown into the breach to settle the dispute. The city always uses Moses to meet its very worst emergencies.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Book-Larnin'.

THERE'S no doubt about it, a man gets something from books that nothing else can give him. In the still hours of the night, when most other people are cogitating on how they could have made that little slam in hearts, or inventing, several hours after the opportunity, a reply which really would have knocked the boss for loops, I lie awake and think of the infinite treasures I glean from books. Being, as the old lady said of the bull when it took the time and patience to chase her three times around the field, remarkably unselfish by nature, I propose to set down a few of my acquisitions here.

I have, to begin then, discovered on some page or other of some book or other:

• • • •

THAT a neat way to impress upon a New Deal friend that the millions of which he is so glib are, in fact, pretty big numbers, is to tell him that all the myriad-seeming stars which he can see on a clear night with his naked eye amount only to some two or three thousand.

That the surest way to cure hiccoughs is to hold your breath. The natural increase of carbon dioxide in the blood allays the spasms.

That the oldest mountains on earth are the Laurentians, in eastern Canada, and the youngest the Himalayas.

That the arterial pressure of blood in a rat foetus, which, of course, must be a very tiny object, is higher than a strong man can blow with his breath.

That if James Boswell, the biographer of Johnson, had been a bit more successful at one stage in his career, Napoleon would have been born a British subject. In 1764 Boswell visited Corsica, at a time when there was agitation for independence from the Genoese, and with great and rather romantic enthusiasm he tried to lead the citizens into making their island a British protectorate. He failed.

• • • •

THAT the well-known French proverb, "Plus ca change, plus c'est la meme chose"—the more things change, the more it is the same thing—really has a definite author. To wit: Alphonse Karr, 1808-1890, novelist, critic, and wit; one-time editor of Le Figaro; enthusiastic gardener, and credited with starting the cut-flower trade on the Riviera.

That cabbages have roots 60 to 80 feet long.

That a gun or steel tool in the hands of some people will start rusting almost at once; in the hands of others it will rust scarcely at all. Gouty people are especially destructive this way. You can tell your own chemical constituency by noticing if you can keep a bunch of steel keys bright or not.

That in the Middle Ages animals were duly tried in law courts, and a sow was once hanged because she ate up her litter.

• • • •

THAT all tidal waves start off the west coast of South America, and that a given high tide will reach Yokohama, some 7,000 miles away, in 13 hours. Col Roscoe Turner himself couldn't keep up with that.

That insects have no lungs, but "breathe" through minute tubules which reach into the body from the surface. Circulation of the air depends on its molecular action, and as scientists have figured that a molecule will jump around something like a quarter of an inch (I may have this wrong, but the fact I'm coming to is straight) you will never find an insect which is more than double that (the tubule in from each side, you see) in thickness. And that hard fact should let us sleep nights when we begin to think of insects happening upon some giant-breeding food like the Wellsian "Food of the Gods."

That the way to keep a cheese souffle from falling is to put some taploca in the mixture first.

That Sinclair Lewis as a young man used to compose plots, on a business basis, for Jack London, although none were ever used. (I read that somewhere, but it sounds fishy. Do any of you know the facts?)

• • • •

THAT Harry Pope, the veteran and honored gunsmith, can make finer and more accurate rifle barrels alone by hand, with his hand-made tools and his simple $50 lathe, than can the greatest and costliest machines erected for the purpose.

That the way to tell if clams are good is to put a silver spoon in the pot with the stew. If the spoon turns black, toss out everything pronto except the spoon.

That Rebecca West, the writer, once went to a famous medium in London, who called upon the scene and held converse with the spirit of "Grandfather West." This was really a rather remarkable example of spiritualistic powers, since "Rebecca West" is a pen name taken from a character in one of Ibsen's plays and the lady's real surname is Fairfield.

It isn't exactly clear to me how I'm going to make any use of these treasures, but it's always nice to know that there are a few nuggets of knowledge handy.

How Gin Fizz Was Born

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, July 25.—The New Orleans States today said the Ramos gin fizz which Senator Huey P. Long had demonstrated in New York was originated by the late Henry C. Ramos in New Orleans in 1886. Ramos died in 1928.

The rights to the Ramos gin fizz are owned at present by the N. C. Ramos, Inc., of which Carl Ramos, son of the originator of the drink, is president. The corporation is composed of members of the Ramos family.

The States said that in Louisiana the rights to the use of the Ramos name are owned by the Roosevelt Hotel, where Senator Long keeps political headquarters.

No Bullet in Balloon

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, July 25.—Orville Anderson, pilot of the stratosphere balloon which collapsed at Rapid City, S. Dak., shortly before its scheduled ascent, disclosed today that no bullet hole was found in the bag's fabric.

Anderson, here with a special investigating committee representing the U. S. Army and National Geographic Society, co-sponsors of the unsuccessful flight, said after the balloon's collapse that a theory was advanced that someone fired a bullet into the bag during its inflation.

The committee said further tests of the balloon fabric will be made in an effort to ascertain the cause of its failure. The group recessed last night, to convene Monday at Washington.

The Capital Mad House

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, July 25.—Mrs. Eva Drew, private secretary to Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, today said she was going to Washington next week "to see the mad house."

The Governor has frequently applied the term "mad house" to Washington in his tirades on the Roosevelt Administration.

Mrs. Drew said she was going to spend her vacation in Washington and added if anyone has any criticism of the Governor while there, "I think I can talk about as fast as they can."

Moscow Rally Of Reds Opens Fascism Fight

7th International Turns Fire Upon Dictators as Chief Foemen.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 25.—The seventh Communist international congress, convening tonight in the presence of the Communist leader, Stalin, directed its opening fire against Fascism, almost to the exclusion of its traditional demand for world revolution.

Four hundred delegates from 50 countries attended the opening session, in the red-decked Hall of Columns. Representatives of the foreign press were excluded.

Two American Communist leaders, Earl Browder and William Z. Foster, were elected to a presidium of 42 members which included Joseph Stalin and George Dimitrov, the Bulgarian Communist who figured in the German trial which followed upon the burning of the Reichstag.

Ernest Taelma, Communist leader imprisoned in Germany, was elected honorary chairman. A German, Wilhelm Pick, delivered the long opening address of the congress.

Stalin's appearance in the Hall of Columns was the signal for 15 minutes of prolonged cheers and applause.

The congress, the first in seven years, got started with what many termed amazing advice from the party organ, Pravda.

The publication called upon Communists throughout the world to concentrate their activities on the fight against Fascism even "coming to the aid of the dying remnants of bourgeois democracy" if necessary to defeat the greater enemy.

Orators at the congress were expected to follow this line of attack in their speeches, with signs pointing to a major offensive against the Hitler regime, and the Italian policy in Africa, as well as Japanese advances in China.

Wade H. D. Warfield To Be Buried Saturday

Sykesville, Md., July 25 (AP).—Senator and retired hardware company, Wade H. D. Warfield, former State head, will be buried in Springfield Cemetery here Saturday.

Services will be held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James O. Ridgely, with requiem mass at St. Josephs Church.

Mr. Warfield, who was 70, died last night after an illness of several weeks. He was elected Democratic member of the State Senate in 1916 from Carroll County. He served one term and was defeated for reelection.

Albemarle Fruit Crop Shows Gain of 100%

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 25.—Apple and peach crops in Albemarle County will be approximately 100 per cent greater than last year, F. E. Merrifield, assistant county agricultural agent, said today.

This is far above the apple production acreage for the country, which is approximately 40 per cent above that of last year. The peach crop also shows a rise in the country as a whole, but not on such a scale as in this county.

Murder Suspect Weeps As Brother Is Buried

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philippi, W. Va., July 25.—William Daugherty, 45, who is in jail charged with killing his brother, Virgil, 53, Sunday after a quarrel over a hog, wept in his cell as the body of his victim was lowered into a grave yesterday near the Daugherty home in the "Bend-of-the-River" section 7 miles from here.

Because the victim's family did not want him to attend the funeral, county authorities did not extend him that privilege. Since the tragedy the prisoner has wept almost constantly.

Irish Church Riots Suspend With Nine Dead

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, Ireland, July 25.—"Hooliganism" officially was blamed today for Northern Ireland's religious rioting, which has taken nine lives since July 12, and Minister of Finance John McIntee said he was ready to use the full force of the law against the guilty persons.

Should the Irish Free State's government find present resources insufficient to safeguard the property and freedom of all citizens, he told the Senate last night, special powers might be demanded.

No disorders were reported today from Belfast, seat of the rioting and incendiarism, but Italians resident in that city protested to Rome against alleged eviction from their homes during the disorders.

The Italian consulate forwarded approximately 30 protests to the Italian embassy in London, which was to send them on to Premier Mussolini. In all, 500 persons were evicted during the troubles, Catholics being ordered out of Protestant areas and vice versa.

A strike in the York Road Flax Spinning Mills was an indirect sequel to the riots, the plant closing when Protestant employes refused to work after 100 Catholic workers appeared for the first time since the disorders began.

The issues involved also spread to Waterford, Free State port, where dock workers objected to unloading the Belfast steamer Park Nasilla. They resumed work at the request of the union secretary, but announced they would not unload any more Belfast cargoes until the religious disturbances ceased.

Wealth Tax Bill Is Approved By House Group

House opposed to changing the present flat corporation tax of 13¾ per cent on net income, House Republicans are expected to concentrate their fire on this item.

Doughton evaded close questioning on this phase of the committee program, declined to disclose the brackets proposed, or even the estimated yield. One member of the committee estimated that revenue from the excess profits levy and the corporation income tax combined would approximate $110,000,000.

Republicans Jeer.

Republican jeers were immediately evoked, when low estimates of the bill's probable yield were circulated about the Capitol. In one quarter it was pointed out that even at the top figure of $250,000,000, the proposed revenues would not finance the expenses of the Government for the short period the committee considered the bill.

Outlays by the Treasury for recovery and relief alone during the first 15 days of this month were $252,356,566, according to Treasury figures, while total expenditures during that period were $535,249,207.

The bill that was hurriedly brought out by the Senate Finance Committee following the President's share-the-wealth message, and then pigeonholed, was estimated to produce $340,000,000. Subsequent studies showed this to be an overestimate.

The Senate Finance Committee will plunge again into the tax question the first of next week, when Chairman Pat Harrison expects to open hearings on the preliminary House draft. His first difficulty will be in meeting demands of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, and his associates, for a broader wealth-sharing plan.

"Forced Measure."

Representative Treadway, ranking Ways and Means Committee Republican, commented last night that the House bill "certainly is not up to expectations and would produce revenues in no way equivalent to the Administration's extravagant expenditures."

"It is evident that this is a forced measure and that Democratic members themselves have very little sympathy with the President's proposals," Treadway said. "Under pressure, they have simply made a gesture to save his face.

"The bill doesn't even come up to the share-the-wealth expectations held out by the President. If that was the objective, they would have approved higher brackets in many instances and a redivision down the line."

Treadway asserted that no Republican Administration has ever written a tax bill not based on definite recommendations and estimates from the departments.

"While the suggestion for this bill came from the President, his Secretary of the Treasury flatly refused to submit schedules. He probably realized that the reaction would be so pronounced that the Administration would desire to throw the responsibility on Congress rather than assume it itself."

"Tax Not Needed."

Echoing views of a strong bloc of Senate Democrats, Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, in a radio address last night said that "in view of its relatively small tax yield, there is no urgency for this kind of a tax bill."

Walsh declared it "unfortunate" that the question of taxes has not been presented to Congress "as a revenue measure rather than as a reform measure."

"If the present Congress is to write and enact a tax bill, let us aim for tax revenues, which the Government so sorely needs," he asserted.

The Massachusetts Democrat said the primary purpose of the President's proposals "is social and economic reform," but added:

"None of the proposals for redistribution of wealth, of which we have recently heard so much, is sound or practical. • • • Let us do no injustice to any class."

Walsh declared that unless Congress proceeds with "extreme caution" in the matter of taxes, "all this source of employment—in the past representing a small army of contented workers—will be wiped out."

Revenues, if they are to come in any substantial volume, must be obtained by increases in the middle and lower brackets, he argued.

"In my judgment, it is impossible to do justice to a tax bill at the tag end of a long and onerous session," he concluded. "In my judgment, Congress should adjourn."

The committee's excess profits tax, described as "moderate" by Chairman Doughton, but compared with a "policing tax" of only 5 per cent now levied on profits of over 12½ per cent, was inserted into the bill as an answer to those who demanded the complete elimination of corporation income levies.

Protests Heard.

Immediately on proposal of the corporation taxes, a protest went up from representatives of business interests, who pointed out that corporatoins reporting any net income had shrunk from 289,430 in 1929 to 82,646 in 1932. It was also pointed out that a compartively small number of corporations report the greater part o fthe total net income. In 1932, out of the 82,646 corporations paying income tax, only 3,750, or about 4½ per cent, had incomes of over $50,000.

The committee was reported overwhelmingly in favor of entirely displacing the corporation income levy with an excess profits tax, but to this the President refused to accede. Put to the test, the committee yielded and by a narrow margin of two Democratic votes, the corporation tax was retained in the bill, and the excess profits tax added.

Only 952 Affected.

Tables submitted to the committee showed there were but 952 individuals earning over $150,000 in 1933, who would be subject to the new surtax brackets. And only one individual in that year was making more than $10,000,000, reached under the proposed bill.

Under the approved inheritance by a 75 per cent surtax, schedules, a $10,000,000 estate would be first reduced $4,416,600 by estate taxes, then further curtailed $2,874,892 by a 51.49 per cent tax on the remainder, leaving the heir but $2,708,608.

Applying this same inheritance schedule, the $72,740,838 estate of the late Harry Payne Whitney, were it subject to the new levies, would be cut down to $6,206,463 by the time it reached the beneficiary.

Illness Is Fatal To Col. Rogers, Oil Capitalist

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., July 25.—Col. Henry Huddleston Rogers, 55, industrialist, military tactician and inheritor of a vast Standard Oil fortune, died in Southampton Hospital today after a series of operations.

Col. Rogers, whose marital adventures alternated before the reading public with those of his daughter, Mary Millicent Rogers, was taken to the hospital two days ago from his nearby Long Island estate.

He had been in failing health since last October, when he was stricken with pneumonia, and had undergone frequent blood transfusions and four operations, the last of which was performed yesterday.

A native of New York, Col. Rogers inherited in 1909 the millions which his father, the late Henry Huddleston Rogers, acquired as an associate of John D. Rockefeller, sr., in building up the vast Standard Oil properties.

Married First in 1900.

In 1900, while still a student at Columbia University, Rogers married Mary Benjamin, society belle and daughter of a distinguished lawyer and scientist. They had two children, Mary Millicent Rogers and Henry Huddleston Rogers, jr.

As a young husband and father, Rogers divided his attention between business and military matters. He was vice president and general manager of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railway and the Staten Island Midland Railroad, president of the Richmond Light & Railroad Co., and vice president of the Virginian Railway Co.

At about the same time he was active in the National Guard and was graduated in 1913 from the school of fire at Fort Sill, Okla. He commanded the Third Field Artillery on the Mexican border in 1916 and went to France with the same outfit during the World War, taking part in the Aisne-Marne and Oise offensives.

Other citations he received were the French Croix de Guerre with palm and the Distinguished Service Medal of the United States.

Daughter Wed to Count.

In 1924 his daughter, Mary Millicent, married Ludwig, Count Salm Von Hoogstraeten, Austrian nobleman, without giving her father advance notice. The irate colonel announced he would not contribute to the couple's support, but he and his daughter were reunited in Paris three months later.

Salm, excluded from the reunion, brought suit and received a settlement reported to have been $500,000. Mary Millicent later married Arturo Peralta Ramos, wealthy Argentine, who found favor with her father.

The colonel meanwhile was having domestic troubles of his own. His first marriage ended in a Holland divorce in 1929, the wife receiving a $3,000,000 trust fund.

Reno Divorce in 1932.

In July of the same year, Col. Rogers remarried, taking as his second wife Mrs. Marguerite von Braun Savell Miles, widow of an American diplomat. This union ended in a Reno divorce in 1932.

His third wife, who survives, was Mrs. Pauline van der Voort Dresser, former wife of an Oklahoma oil operator, whom he married in August, 1933.

Fond of entertaining, Col. Rogers installed an elaborate glass-inclosed swimming pool on his Long Island estate, reputed to have cost nearly $1,000,000. It was modeled after the famous ancient baths of Pompeii.

MANY a shivery morning on the Flanders Front, they blessed the name of Gilbey's as sleepy-eyed fliers stumbled into fur-lined flying suits. Two fingers of Gilbey's and they took the air . . . wide-eyed and wide-awake . . . for a deadly game of hide-and-seek with the Baron von Richthofen.

For nearly three-quarters of a century, Gilbey's Gin has been woven deep into the British people's life. And from cocktail hour in Mayfair to a tiger hunt in Burma, wherever and whenever men who loved fine liquors met in peril or in play, Gilbey's was there.

For nearly three quarters of a century, Gilbey's has been one of the world's great gins. Yet today you can have this extraordinary quality at a most extraordinary price! No more than you pay for ordinary gins! For Gilbey's is now made in America. That cuts all tariff duties from the price. And Gilbey's is made down in the grain belt under the control of America's greatest distilling organization from grain to bottle. And that makes the price still lower.

When you buy a bottle of Gilbey's Gin taste it straight first . . . and see why Gilbey's makes all your gin drinks so much better!

Troops to Go If Terre Haute Remains Quiet

By the Associated Press.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 25.—Col. Albert H. Whitcomb said today additional troops may be withdrawn from the strike area here if the decline in disorder continues tomorrow. "I think we are ironing out the situation and am pleased with the change of attitude," he said.

Guardsmen today reported only a few minor infractions of military regulations. All but 9 of the 180 persons who had been in jail since the general strike, which began Monday and ended Tuesday night, gained freedom after sharp warnings.

Meanwhile, Charles L. Richardson, of Washington, and Harry E. Scheck, of Chicago, Federal conciliators, asserted they felt settlement of the controversy at the Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co. would be impossible until "all the excitement had died down." A strike at the Columbian plant started when officials refused to agree to a closed shop.

The conciliators, after conferring throughout the day with labor representatives and others, explained they merely were collecting data and that their conversations had not reached the agreement stage.

Twenty pickets patrolled the entrance.

The group was addressed by Giles H. Miller, jr., Culpeper National Bank cashier. About 40 were present.

Legal Tender Limit For 'Midget Money'

By the Associated Press.

Even if the Government should make midget money, you won't be allowed to pay bills with a carload of coins that make ten to the cent.

The Treasury said last night that—if authorized by Congress—the new 1-mill pieces would be legal tender only to the amount of 3 cents, while the new half-cent piece would be legal to the amount of only 10 cents.

This means that the maximum number of such coins that could be used legally in making purchases would be 30 mills and 20 half-pennies.

Missouri Reduces Democrat Deficit

Oregon, Kansas Raised 70 Per Cent of Quotas.

The Democratic Party's deficit is being reduced.

W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the national committee, yesterday announced receipt of $10,000 to apply on Missouri's quota of $25,000 toward wiping out the indebtedness. Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City leader, gave $5,000 of the amount and William T. Kemper, also of Kansas City, gave $1,000, it was reported by James T. Aylward, State chairman.

"Oregon and Kansas," said a statement by Morgan, "have responded with over 70 per cent of their quotas, Texas and Massachusetts with 50 per cent, Pennsylvania with 40 per cent and a number of others are expected to report during the next few weeks."

The party deficit in February was $520,670.94. On June 8 it had been reduced to $381,663.53.

Slightly Cooler Today, Forecaster Promises

Excessive humidity and a temperature that climbed to a maximum of 90 kept Washington sweltering yesterday, although no heat prostrations were reported to police.

Charwomen to Get Full Pay on Holidays

By the Associated Press.

The House decided yesterday that the charwomen who clean up the huge Government office buildings ought to be paid for official holidays just as other Government employes.

So it passed and sent to the Senate a bill by Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, that would give them pay for holidays equivalent to that for ordinary working days.

3 Youths Admit $5,000 Gem Theft

Brought From Georgia, Held for Grand Jury.

Three youths were held under $3,000 bond each for the grand jury yesterday when they pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage to charges of grand larceny.

The three, William Saxon, 17, and James V. Torrence, 17, both of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mathew Poythress, 18, of Savannah, Ga., were arrested in Savannah a few days ago on a complaint by Herman Hesch, salesman for a New York jewelry firm, who told police that $5,000 worth of gems had been stolen from his car parked at Tenth and G streets northwest, two weeks ago.

The youths were captured after a bellboy in a Savannah hotel became suspicious when he saw them "flash" a large quantity of jewelry in the hotel lobby. Detective Sergt. Charles E. Warfield, of Washington, brought the suspects back.

Gaucherons' Table Lures PingPongers

The Padillas Rival French Aid's Sisters in Skill; Jackstones Next?

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Young people in the diplomatic set, skilled in lawn tennis, also have gone in seriously for "baby tennis," as they call that energetic game, ping-pong.

"Les petites Gaucherons" as their friends refer to the two sisters of M. Roger Gaucheron, first Secretary of the French Embassy, Simone and Madeleine, are ardent and clever players. They have set up a ping-pong table in the drawing room of their house on Thirty-fourth street. Amid an enchanting array of modernistic chromium furniture, the green table stands out glaringly, but the Gaucheron sisters are so devoted to the game that even their interior decorting talent is not offended by the table. Guests gather there to watch the game which always follows, not unwisely, the delicious meals which the French cook prepares. M. Gaucheron has sailed for a vacation in Europe, and soon his sisters will start on a motor trip through New England. But just now they are playing ping-pong.

Several years ago when the present French Ambassador to Brussels, M. Paul Claudel, was representing his country here, the French Embassy was a rendezvous for ping-pong devotees. In the little room back of the dining room Mlle. Reine Claudel, now Mme. Jacques Paris, and her brother, Henri and Pierre, slapped the little white ball across the miniature net with all the acumen displayed when they played tennis.

Another clever player is Senor Don Ramon Padilla, second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, who apparently rates ping pong on almost as high a plane as tennis. Adept in both games, he used to give his sister, Senorita Marichu Padilla, a keen competition both on inside and outside courts. When Senor Padilla's father, Senor Don Alejandro Padilla y Bell, was Ambassador to Washington, a number of years ago, Senorita Marichu was the undisputed ping pong champion of Washington. In those days there was also a table on the top floor of the chancery of the Italian Embassy where almost every day the younger set met after tea, and one and all tried to beat Senorita Padilla.

All these young people who now play ping pong enjoy it thoroughly, and refuse to be upset by the scorn of those who suggest that, with ping pong reigning this year, next year tiddledewinks, another game of the gay nineties, will come in for a revival. With backgammon and chess bidding for favor all winter, the little group may be playing jackstones before another year.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am writing you in the earnest hope that you may be able to help me solve a great problem. I am a victim of the depression and still floundering in its depths, utterly bewildered. I was reared in comfort, not wealthy, but with a devoted mother and father who provided all the necessities and many of the little luxuries. My father died before these hectic years set in, leaving my mother an adequate income. Bad business deals and incompetent advisers, together with the depression, swept away the income and my mother and I went to live with relatives. They gave us room and board and we managed with what clothes we had.

• • • •

Time went on and our relatives grew tired of what they called "handing out." Of course we helped around the house, but they did not consider that enough. They wanted us to get jobs. As neither mother nor I knew the least thing about business, the idea was appalling. This spring, things became so disagreeable that I was literally forced into getting a job. Mother is not strong enough to go out to work. Against my better judgment (for I knew I was not fitted for office work) I accepted a job which required no experience. I make $5 a week. I am of a high-strung, nervous temperament, easily upset when things are not congenial. I have an intense horror of being in an office. To me it is like being in prison. Everything about it is abhorrent to me. Naturally I am utterly miserable, yet I must have the money.

• • • •

What I have been leading up to is this question: Isn't it possible for me to find some work I could do at home to make $5 a week? Mother and I can manage on that amount, as our relatives are willing to give us a room provided we buy our own food and other necessities. I intend to keep this job for a while, until we can pay some small but urgent bills, but I do not see how I can continue indefinitely in work that is so distasteful to me, when I could be happy doing work at home.

• • • •

You see, it is not the work but the long hours in office that I mind. Our relatives can't see my point of view and consider me most unusual because I enjoy staying at home. I suppose it is unusual, but as I happen to have a home-loving nature (and that is a thing found seldom enough nowadays) why can't I find something to do at home? I shouldn't care what it was, although I am especially apt at sewing and love especially to make children's clothes. I also type and have my own typewriter and I do hand-painted giftware. This last I have tried to find a market for, but have been unsuccessful.

• • • •

I know my situation is a little out of the ordinary, but I hope you'll understand and maybe be able to help me. Thank you. Yours sincerely. V. E.

Learn Self-Control.

DEAR V. E.: Since you are an apt seamstress and can also type, it's entirely possible you can find work to do at home which will create an income of $5 a week. You might advertise for manuscripts to type, or for sewing to do.

I must say, however, that I believe you are most unwisely encouraging neurasthenic tendencies in yourself by giving way to your "intense horror of being in an office." I think if you would discount your conviction that your passionate attachment to home is a rare, fine, old-fashioned virtue, and recognize it as an escape mechanism from a world of reality which you subconsciously fear, you would be more on the right track.

• • • •

Your physical and nervous health probably needs building up. Isn't it possible for you to consult an able diagnostician about your nervous fears? By obtaining such help you should find it possible to reorganize your thinking so that you can make the most of the business opportunity you already have. And to do that is, in my opinion, your real salvation—both economic and constitutional.

• • • •

If you should continue to permit your fears and your emotional preferences to shape your actions, instead of directing your actions by the exercise of the will, it's entirely probable you will find yourself becoming progressively neurotic and ineffectual.

• • • •

Until you have learned to master yourself, it's scarcely possible to hope to alter circumstances. And it is far better to adapt one's self to circumstances which are temporarily in control than to struggle hysterically against them. You can obtain psychotherapeutic instruction free of charge by applying to the Washington Life Adjustment Center, of which Miss Beulah Smith is director. Her telephone number is ADams 7979. M. H.

98-Year-Old Woman Joins Swimming Class

Panamas at Greatly Reduced Prices Are Available at Capital Stores

Boutonnieres That Last Can Be Bought for 25 and 50 Cents.

By John Q. Alexander.

WITH SUMMER at its height, there remain quite a few men who haven't caught on to the fact that they'll suffer less if they'll just do a little judicious buying in the matter of lightweight clothes.

Neatest trick of the year is being able to balance both the wardrobe and the budget, and this is the best season in which to try it. Most men's stores are featuring sales and we've done a bit of wily snooping. It's a swell time to buy because there's still plenty of warm weather coming . . . and you'll be that much ahead next year. Therefore, for those who are about to go down for the third time in perspiration, we throw out these life lines. All items mentioned have been hand-picked from current special sales.

First aid to comfort is a lightweight suit. We saw some handsome ones of white cord cotton fabric, in single or double-breasted models, well tailored, that would make a neat addition to your vacation wardrobe. Mix either coat or trousers with the same of another color and you've really got something. We couldn't believe our eyes when we saw the price . . . $7.85. What's more, they're sanforized so as not to shrink and you can have them washed in your washing machine at home.

• • • •

Don't - Let - the - Heat-Go-to-Your-Head Department: This same store, in a happy frenzy of slashing prices, will let you take home any panama hat you like for $2.85—regardless of former price. There's still a month and a half left to wear a straw and you'll be glad you have it when they're back up around $5 next spring.

• • • •

Bedford cord slacks, which would go well with the suit mentioned above, are on sale in one store for $1.79. The weaves are unusually good . . . various stripes in white, black or brown and plain colors. And don't say nobody loves a fat man—these are available in waist sizes up to 48!

If you want to be a real swell, get yourself a boutonniere, as we murmur on the boulevards. Real flowers are expensive and short-lived, but now you can get a pseudo-carnation or corn-flower for your button hole that's real as life and twice as beautiful. These are made of a wood pulp composition but look, feel and even smell (faintly) like the genuine article. They are practically required for evening wear and will do much to give you an air of well-groomed urbanity all through your waking hours. Carnations (maroon preferred) are 50 cents; corn flowers 25 and 50 cents.

• • • •

Country - Gentleman Department: When we get really warm, we like to imagine ourselves garbed in a natural linen suit, of a honey-sand color something like that in the material grandma used in her summer furniture coverings, sitting on a high porch over the sea, sipping endless mint juleps. We saw the suit yesterday; the rest is yet to come. It's sturdy and masculine looking, won't soil easily and won't show wrinkles as easily as its white brothers. $20, and we're going to own one next pay-day.

• • • •

Without the shadow of a doubt, the best hat to wear with this suit is of brown straw. You can get one for $1.95. These are really practical, since they seem to be clean long after they actually are not, and are on special sale this week. Brown straw has been popular this year and should be even more so next season.

Satorially sjeaking, a man's best friend is his sweater. It won't wrinkle, it won't get out of shape, it doesn't need cleaning often, and it lasts for a long time. Apropos of this, you shall hear of the most amazing sale of sweaters we've ever come upon.

They're there in all colors, all weaves, all sizes, the best lot of sweaters you can imagine, all marked down beautifully. The one we liked best was of lemon yellow, chain stitch, the very thing for sports or to wear under your jacket. Sleeveless, $2.95. Others you'll like hover around the same price. We're enthused about these and you will be, too. They're swell.

Sun - on - the - Beach Department: For shore and mountain and field and stream there's nothing like a tropical helmet. And the cheapest one we've discovered seems to be the most practical, in a way. Take it on a fishing trip or beach party for the week-end. It will keep the sun off your hair and out of your eyes, and it gives you such a grand feeling to throw it away—like tossing money around. They cost just 25 cents.

For general sports wear there's a new ascot shirt with stock attached. It's of loose basket weave cotton, and looks much better than an ordinary shirt open at the collar. The stock loops over once (see illustration). There's no tight collar around your neck and the style is becoming, particularly to mature men. Swell for horseback wear and good for almost any informal sports wear, with or without a jacket. $1.95.

Belts-for-a-Song Department: All the smart styles, marked down to 68 cents. If your white belts are as grimy as ours by now, you'll want to re-stock from these. Plain and fancy designs, string weaves and perforated leather.

MRS. T. C. SCHMIDT, who recently returned from a 20-year sojourn in the Netherland East Indies, gives some sidelights on the weather and women in Java.

Women in 'Pearl of the Orient' Still Bear the Family Burden's While Husbands Sit and Talk, Mrs. T. C. Schmidt Declares.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WASHINGTON IN JULY has one thing in common with Java any time in the year—the weather. "So far as the heat is concerned, you can close your eyes here and imagine you're almost anywhere in the Netherland East Indies," said Mrs. T. C. Schmidt, who recently returned with her husband, son and daughter from a 20-year sojourn in an island that has at least three appelations not in keeping with its climate—"Paradise of the East," "The Pearl of the Orient," and "The Queen's Jewel."

Now visiting her sister, Mrs. H. C. Witzke, in Takoma Park, Mrs. Schmidt yesterday described the people who inhabit Java, that dot in the Indian Ocean, south of China, that colony almost equal in area to New York State and one of the most densely populated regions in the world.

For two decades, Mrs. Schmidt and her husband, who was formerly head of the Seventh Day Adventist school in Bandoeng, have watched the changes in civilizaiton in this colony peopled by Malays, Chinese, Hindus, Portuguese and Dutch. In those 20 years the status of Javanese women has improved little, according to Mrs. Schmidt.

Remain Burden Bearers.

"They are still the burden bearers, the workers of the typical Javanese family," she said. "And apparently they are quite content to let their husbands spend all their time resting and talking and discussing the affairs of the day."

Like the women in the neighborhood island of Bali, the Javanese amuse themselves with dances and unique shadow plays and puppet shows, Mrs. Schmidt said. "But in contrast to their neighbors, the women of Java are not pretty, despite their smooth dark skin, dark hair and black eyes. Since they marry very early and begin bearing children at the age of 13 or 14, they age quickly; they are generally stooped, probably because of their habit of carrying bundles on their shoulders instead of on their heads; and the majority of the Malay women have red or blackened teeth from chewing betelnuts."

Men Favor Straight Skirts.

What does the well-dressed Malay woman wear? "A patterned sarong wrapped around her from waist to heel, or a loose batik skirt and a box-cut jacket," said Mrs. Schmidt. "And for special occasions, she dons sandals, other times she goes barefoot."

She further explained Malay men favored straight skirts, ankle-length, and loose jackets with turbans to match.

Describing living conditions among the natives, Mrs. Schmidt mentioned that the typical Malay dwellings are "small shacks constructed of bamboo, with only one or two rooms, sparsely furnished and providing shelter for an entire family." She pointed out, however, that because of the high mortality in Java, families are not large. "There are usually no more than two or three living children in each household, although the average Malay woman bears from 10 to 12," she said.

In addition to spending almost 20 years in Java, Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt lived a year in Singapore and Sumatra. But they feel a greater kinship with the people of Java, according to Mrs. Schmidt because "we stayed there so long, won so many converts, and made so many steadfast friends. Besides, both our children were born there." She has a son, 15, and a daughter, 18.

"Do we hope to go back to Java? Perhaps, some day. Right now we're enjoying our own country. But, of course, once you've spent 20 years in "the Pearl of the Orient," you certainly wouldn't mind going back."

Paris Mourns Passing Glory Of Style Street

Shops Quit Rue de la Paix, Where the Empress Eugenie Shopped.

PARIS, July 25.—The glory of the Rue de la Paix—capital of the style world—seems to be on the wane.

The three short blocks of that famous street, mart of millions in fashions and jewels, have seen changes in the last few years. On the sidewalks where Empress Eugenie shopped, doors have darkened and closed, sometimes to open again with new names and cheaper goods.

Now the house of Worth, which has catered to queens there for 90 years, is going to move "up town" near the Elysee Palace. The move of the Rue de la Paix is passing."

The style world talks of the "crisis," "high rents" and "tight money" but the reasons go deeper than that. They spell the trend of times, which cuts deep into the Paris dressmaker's paradise.

A Matter of Overhead.

There is as much difference be- of the oldest dressmaking house in Paris brought whispers, "the glory tween choosing a wardrobe in a big dressmaking house and dashing into a huge department store, seeing that little afternoon model in blue size 36 and picking it off the rack for yourself in green, size 34, as there is between a handsome coach-and-four and a streamlined racing roadster.

In the mirrored salons of a big designer's house parade the mannequin queens who stage a morning and afternoon "show" to display the collection of latest models. In the same rooms reign the suave vandeuses (saleswomen) who help the customer make her choice after lengthy confabs on Madame's "type" and the wardrobe she already has. The models are made to order and that takes time.

Such a big dressmaking palace costs "like sixty" to run. Rents are high and electric light bills sometimes almost strike the owner "blind." There must be brass-buttoned doormen to open motors, brass-buttoned boys to close elevators, pages, stenographers, modelists who design clothes, hundreds of little sewing girls to do the handwork which is Paris' mark of chic and someone to pick up ravelings.

Women Have Changed.

To support that there must be big money rolling in. That money must come from women — and women have changed much in the last 30 years.

The wife of a rich husband who granted a big allowance used to have but one place to put it—clothes. Today she has bridge, sports, a little car of her own and a dozen different social activities. She uses a score of new cosmetics, has a permanent wave and goes to the hairdresser and manicurist at least once a week.

Her time and money must be divided among them all. She is no longer willing to see a collection several times, come back with her husband to find what he likes and take another week to make up her mind. If she is a thorough modern, she wants to take one good, fast concentrated look and say, "I'll take this and that and that. Please make No. 243 up in blue organza instead of black lace and I'd like a fitting next Tuesday."

Proper Eating Should Be Taught Early

Poor Selection of Food Often Is Cause of Undernourishment.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE thin, underweight youngster excites the sympathy of everyone. He may not be as tall as other children of his age, his muscles may be flabby, and his complexion pale. Sometimes he carries an anxious expression, with dark circles under the eyes. Such lads tire easily, are noticeably irritable, and lack the spirit of spontaneous play.

Occasionally we can explain the case on the basis of insufficient food, but more often than not the condition is due to inadequate knowledge of the value of foods to improper eating habits, and to a poor selection of the foods themselves.

In a recent survey of school children in Wales it was emphasized that malnutrition should be laid to "wrong" feeding rather than underfeeding. Special complaint was made against bread and jam, as most of the undernourished children were found to be fond of this combination. After a substantial amount had been eaten, hunger was satisfied and there was no disposition to take other needed types of food.

Proper Eating Important.

Proper eating habits are important. If left to themselves some children will naturally select foods sufficiently nourishing to maintain growth and prevent rickets. Others, between the ages of 2 and 6 particularly, will establish faulty food habits and become the victims of self-induced ill health. Many of these youngsters become users of tea and coffee at an early age; rely upon candy and other forms of sweets between meals; eat well one day and poorly the next; or eat too rapidly. Some consume a scanty, unbalanced breakfast or no breakfast at all, while others may not like milk and yet receive no proper substitute. One need not wonder when such child loses his appetite, becomes capricious as to what he likes and does not like, and develops into a thin, peaked, undernourished adolescent.

Although the intelligence of mothers is increasing, some children are left to shift for themselves, with the result that habits of hygiene and of eating are formed without due regard for nutrition. The principal objective, therefore, is the inculcation at an early age of proper eating habits.

Of course the child will not eat equally well at all times. As has been pointed out earlier in this column, the appetite of a child may follow a pendulumlike swing from a particular fondness for one type of food to that of another at a later date. Rather than discourage these appetite waves they may be let alone, provided the diet remains balanced and no important food element is omitted. Stimulants to appetite are sometimes required. This does not mean tonic drugs. It may mean, however, cod liver oil and other vitamin containing foods. The attractiveness of food, the regularity of meals, and the quiet and comfort of the family dinner hour are all conducive to the child's taking of a normal amount of proper food.

Drink Cooling Is Simplified By Ice Bucket

Handy Gadgets of Thermos Material Are on Sale Here for $7.

By Dudley Harmon

Pinch-hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S ONLY one thing worse than an egg without salt, and that's a drink without ice. Drinks and ice go together just like June and moon. Most summer drinking, we've noticed, however, is done on the porch or on the lawn, far away from the source of supply. But now you can take your ice right along with you, so that your drinks will always be refreshingly cold. A Connecticut avenue gift shop has on sale the most delightful little ice buckets, made of a thermos material which keeps the ice frozen. They come in black and chromium, or natural wood with brass banding, and are as stunning as they are practical. You need not worry about frequent trips to the kitchen with one of these handy little gadgets. They're ideal for picnics, too. They cost $7, and, we're told, are selling like hot cakes.

For Forgotten Men.

HERE'S AN ITEM for forgotten men. Most advertisers in the deodorant line address their pleas to the fair sex, but now you men can buy a deodorant created especially for you. It's stainless, non-perfumed, and an absolute necessity for that game of golf and tennis. It prevents odor without checking normal, healthy perspiration, and sells for only 50 cents a tube.

Foot Protectors.

IT'S SUCH fun to go places in the summer without stockings. In the first place, it's much cooler, and, furthermore, it gives you a chance to show off that hard-earned, handsome tan. The only hitch is it's unpleasant to have your feet unprotected by stockings or socks. Furthermore it's sometimes downright dangerous, as the frequent rubbing of shoe against hot foot can cause excessive irritation and occasionally even infection. But you need not worry on that score, if you will take a look at some tiny little foot protectors which a local department store has on sale. Made like a sock, they come only part way up the foot—just far enough, in fact, to protect it from the shoe, but not far enough to be visible. They come in two materials, lisle and silk, and you can buy them in the same size you get your hose. They cost only 25 cents.

Nail Polish Removers.

WOULDN'T YOU think it too good to be true if someone told you that you no longer had to worry about split and cracked fingernails after using a liquid polish remover? It seems incredible, but someone has invented a remover which cleans the nails and at the same time prevents them from cracking. It's amazing! Made of rich vegetable oils, this polish remover gives to your nails just the oil they need to remain in good condition. It feeds and nourishes them with its life-giving qualities. And attractive fingernails are so important to one's appearance, and yet so difficult to achieve. So many liquids contain chemicals which are harmful to the nail. So it's well worth your while to rush down to the department store which is featuring this amazing remover and order several. The price is only 25 cents a bottle.

Ruth Anne Davis has compiled a list of 20 aids to summer beauty, with the names of the shops where these cosmetics can be purchased. This leaflet will be sent on receipt of a 2-cent stamp. Address Miss Davis in care of The Washington Post.

A small piquant salad appetizer—it's an American idea that has won recognition abroad. Here we have chilled tomato slices nested in crisp lettuce cups each topped with a mixture of crab flakes and tartar sauce, a dash of mayonnaise dressing and a ripe olive.

Piquant Dishes Are Doubly Useful in Summer, for They Cut Down Courses; Minted Chocolate Milk and 4-Fruit Sherbet Recipes Given.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF SO FAR THIS SUMMER your ideas for appetizers have run the merry-go-round of fruit cup, melon ball cocktail, chilled tomato juice and jellied consomme, it is high time that you are getting off the beaten track and making a fresh start. Give credit where credit is due, and remember that some good American with a flare for the original served the first salad appetizer. This small piquant salad served as a first course has become a popular custom, and it is a particularly good custom to follow in hot weather when we are trying to cut down our meals into as few courses as possible.

A salad, if small and prepared of ingredients that will whet the appetite, serves a two-fold purpose for summer meals. It restores lagging appetites and makes it unnecessary to serve a salad after the main course.

Vegetables and fruits may be used separately or in combination for the salad appetizer. Seafood too has its place and may be served in combination with fresh, succulent vegetables.

Filling Should Be Firm.

For your first salad appetizer try a crab meat and tomato combination. Cut half inch slices from the center of large tomatoes. Chill the tomato slices in the coldest part of the refrigerator until they are almost frozen. Top each slice with chilled crab flakes which have been mixed with half tartar sauce and half mayonnaise. Be sure that the mixture is well blended but not runny. Place the tomato slices in small cups of crisp lettuce and top the crab mixture with a dash of plain mayonnaise and a ripe olive. Serve with lemon wedges.

Tomato-Melon-Radish Salad.

Here is another interesting vegetable and fruit combination. Shred crisp lettuce and make a small bed of it on each plate. Top the lettuce with a slice of chilled tomato. On top of each tomato slice place a moon-shaped wedge of pinkish yellow melon, the edges of which have been slashed. Insert paper-thin slices of radishes to stand upward in the slashes. Serve a sharp, thin French dressing separately and slices of lemon for those who prefer it to dressing.

Melba toast or crisp toasted crackers and butter may accompany the salad appetizer.

Make minted chocolate milk by the following directions. For each glass of milk, melt one or two chocolate peppermint patties in the top of a double boiler. Mix the melted patties with the iced milk and serve.

Four-Fruit Sherbet.

4 cups sugar
1 cup lemon juice
6 maraschino cherries, finely cut
4 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
1 2-3 cups orange juice
4 bananas, mashed
1 egg white, slightly beaten

Cook sugar and water together 5 minutes. Cool. Add fruit juices and salt, then bananas, mashed with silver fork. Let stand 1 hour. Rub through coarse sieve. Add cherries and egg white. Freeze using eight parts ice to one part salt, and then pack using four parts ice to one part salt. Makes 3 quarts sherbet.

Women Gaining Rights in India, Feminist Says

A NEW DEAL for the women of India is reported by Mrs. Deep N. Singh, of Bhagalpur, India, who arrived in Canada recently from the Orient. Supposedly considered an inferior race in their country, Indian women are now actually occupying positions as doctors, lawyers and bankers, according to Mrs. Singh. She said there was a bank in Calcutta "manned" by women, and predicted that the women of India shortly may be taking their place in the political life of the country as the result of the recent Indian home rule bill.

Mrs. Singh, an active feminist, attributes the increasing activity of women partly to the fact that the age of consent to marriage by a woman has been raised to 14 years, thus eliminating the child marriage to which the Western world in particular could never become accustomed.

A Closet for Toys Keeps House Neat

A CLOSET for toys will prove a great aid in keeping a house neat. Frequently, even though a child may have been trained to pick up toys from the center of the floor, there is still no place to put them that will give the house a straightened-up look.

A closet in the nursery or in a hall will solve the problem. It is excellent training for children if they are taught "a place for everything and everything in its place."

Parents Cautioned to Be Sure Of the Purity of Baby's Milk

A YOUNG BABY will stand the hot weather well if you make him comfortable, says Dr. Josephine H. Kenyon, in the August Good Housekeeping.

"Be sure of the purity of the milk," she advises. "See that it is of standard quality; that it is kept cool in transit to your home, and that you handle it carefully, keeping it below 50 degrees F., but not at freezing. Choose certified or pasteurized cow's milk if it is available daily. If you can not get this and are not sure of the purity of the milk, boil it for five minutes, or use canned evaporated or dried milk."

"Prepare the formula each day and keep it in freshly boiled bottles. If the baby leaves any food, throw it away; it is not safe to reheat and use it. Also prepare boiled water fresh daily. Choose the best fresh eggs, vegetables and fruits. Serve them the same day they are cooked. But if you must keep them over one night, cool them before placing in a refrigerator. This also applies to canned vegetables. Always be sure to protect all foods from flies and insects.

"If the baby wants less food and more water on days of extreme heat, let him follow his natural inclinations. Don't force food upon him. It is unwise at all time and especially so during hot weather.

"Give him a daily bath either at morning or at night. If possible, give him a supplementary sponge bath at any other time. When it is hot, clothe him in a diaper only, or at the most, a diaper and a cotton or linen shirt. But when his hands and feet are cold, put more garments on him, even though you yourself feel warm at the time and the thermometer is high. Be sure to use a light covering at night because of possible sudden changes in temperature.

"Give him his outdoor airing in the cool of the morning and in late afternoon. Plan his sun bath so that it is given just before the morning airing and again after the burning heat of the day has passed. A minute or two of exposure is all he can stand at first. Then gradually lengthen the exposure by a minute or two until a 20-minute period is reached.

"Heed even the slightest warning of illness. Call the doctor and shift the responsibility to his shoulders."

What Today Means

"Leo."

IF JULY 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Force yourself to overcome any feeling that there is something limiting the amount of your activities this day. This imaginary idea is likely to prevail on this date but can be easily banished from your thoughts. Constructive thinking is essential for the furtherance of any business or social ideas. In business activities take nothing for granted. Facts and important points must be clearly defined if results are to be obtained. The turtle and armadillo have both been provided by nature with an armor that enables them to retire from public intrusion.

You have been gifted with intellectual, moral and physical attributes that will enabe you to face any issue, so you have no logical excuse to attempt to withdraw should something come up that needs to be boldly confronted. A bold stand wins at least respect, if not victory. Married and engaged couples, and those going through the transitory stages of love, must guard against displaying any sort of peevish temperament if they would avoid discordant conditions.

If a woman and July 26 is your birthday, you are probably so unselfish that you permit yourself to be imposed upon. This is a mistake. You may find that if you do not protect your own interests, no one else will. You have a good head for business, so if your talents are commercialized, you likely will make a good deal of money. Should you ever engage in business for yourself, it will be wise to remember overexpansion is a very dangerous thing. Avoid taking speculative chances. Guard against allowing flattery to warp your better judgment.

A husband, if confided in, possibly will take a great interest in furthering your ambitions, if you know they meet with his approval. Love should dominate your household, bringing within its portals harmonious conditions. Restaurant or tea room management, the stage, lecture platform, writing, demonstration work and selling are among the activities you can successfully engage in.

If a man and July 26 is your natal day, you have the qualifications needed to be successful in law, politics, engineering, theology, writing, painting, manufacturing or selling.

Color Is Found Major Factor In Food Value

Green and Yellow Plants and Fruits Furnish Vitamin A.

ONE OF THE many discoveries about foods in the last few years has to do with the coloring. In green leaves and stems of plants, in the yellow roots, also in the yellow fruits, is a yellow pigment called carotene. Carotene in the animal body turns into vitamin A. Cows that have had good green pasture and good hay give milk rich in vitamin A. Egg yolks are richer in vitamin A when hens have plenty of green foods. When human beings eat green or yellow vegetables and certain red ones, they get carotene, which is changed into vitamin A in the liver. When they drink milk or eat eggs or butter or liver or salmon they get vitamin A made from the green food eaten by an animal.

The green and yellow vegetables also furnish other vitamins and several minerals. They help to keep the acid-base balance in the body, since most of them are alkaline forming. They also furnish bulk. But their most important function is to supply vitamin A which helps to keep in good condition the linings or epithelia tissues of the nose, throat, eyes, ears, sinuses, glands, and internal organs of the body. This is why an adequate supply of vitamin A is considered helpful in avoiding colds or other infections that attack these parts of the body.

Carrots are among the best of all the yellow vegetables for carotene and hence vitamin A. Squash comes next, then pumpkin and yellow turnips. Among the leafy vegetables, the greener they are, the more carotene. New, green cabbages are a better source than the whiter heads. Collards are good, and they are a standby in the South all winter. Turnip greens, too, are hardy enough to grow well into the winter. The pepper family is a good source of carotene and also of vitamin B and C. Green peppers and red peppers are equally good.

Fine for Extra Guests, Built-In Bed Saves Room

Built-in beds take care of extra guests and do not take up valuable space at times when they are not needed. Attic rooms with sloping walls that make it difficult to use an ordinary bedstead will look well with built-in bunks, and guest rooms may be created from top-floor space formerly wasted.

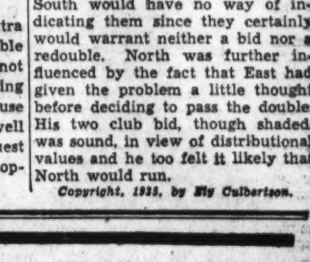
Psychic Notrumps.

The bluff notrump was the earliest weapon of the primitive stages of the psychic bid. It has been discarded long since by good players because the defense against it—the business double—was too easy and the ensuing run out too revealing.

In today's hand this bluff notrump takes a different trend. The East player recognized all the symptoms of this ancient practice and proceeded to put the usual defense into practice. Unfortunately for his side, the North player was courageous enough to stick to his guns.

East, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♡	Pass	2♣	2NT
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

When North made his bid of two notrump it was not intended entirely as a psychic. If South, for example, could find a raise, three notrump should be easy. East doubled because he recognized that the two notrump bid was based on a long diamond suit. Partner's two club bid had shown strength and his own void in diamonds indicated a possibility that the suit which North considered solid might possibly be stopped by West. Even if it was not, East had no way of telling that North had eight diamonds, and would decide to stand by the double. Actually, North's decision to gamble it out was not without reason. The club bid had not been supported and if South had three to the Queen and four spades to the ten, there was an excellent chance to make his two notrump contract. Yet, holding these cards, South would have no way of indicating them since they certainly would warrant neither a bid nor a redouble. North was further influenced by the fact that East had given the problem a little thought before deciding to pass the double. His two club bid, though shaded was sound, in view of distributional values and he too felt it likely that North would run.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

ALL of the 45,000 employes at Agriculture and farmers throughout the country will find a valuable reference handbook in the department's 1935 yearbook, which is just off the press.

BAKER.

The articles are non-technical and cover a great variety of subjects, including those dealt with by the AAA. Among the topics to which the book devotes special attention are soil erosion, eradication and control of insect pests, forest conservation, animal husbandry and chemical investigations.

In a foreword, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, emphasizes the importance of organizing scientific research, without destroying the spirit of free inquiry.

"We combine organization with freedom in our political life," he says. "We are trying to do the same in the economic sphere. There is an identical problem in science. Organization is necessary in this field, too. Modern science is cooperative. Scientific men can not work in isolation without funds, equipment, and communication with fellow workers. But, the organization of research, particularly in studies that affect economic interests is difficult. It tempts us to anticipate findings. This temptation we must resist. Otherwise the research is spurious and the research morale declines. Science is either free or dead. In organizing research we must not destroy its nature and leave only a mechanism."

That the Department of Agriculture has measurably solved this problem and discovered how to organize research without regimenting the research personnel is indicated by the new yearbook, the Secretary's foreword declares.

The Secretary further remarks that the articles, although generally expressing a consensus among specialists in the subject discussed and in related fields, do not exclude individual opinion and individual findings.

The department does not impress a dead uniformity on the writings of its scientific staff, but encourages freedom of expression, as well as freedom of inquiry.

Besides the general articles by the department's specialists, the volume contains the annual report of the Secretary for 1934, and the usual collection of agricultural statistics.

Clerks Need Leave.

Why should we grieve for lost annual leave!
Don't sit and grieve! Strive to achieve!
Let's each run after his Congressman
And get him to vote for it if he can.
What sort of vacation can any one plan
With no more leave!
Clerks need leave! More annual leave!
Clerks need leave! Leave let's achieve!
We're eager to work, but more work and less pay
Means far greater hardship than cutting our pay!
O, Congress, we're hoping you'll see it our way!
Clerks need leave

F. E. M. (F), Internal Revenue.

Nice to Take G.O.P. Chiefs On a Cruise

Fletcher to Join Other Eastern Leaders on Bay Boat Trip.

Lawson Insists Voyage Is Not Presidential Boom for Host.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 25.—Fresh from a string of conferences with leaders of the Republican Party in the Far and Middle West, Gov. Harry W. Nice will return to Baltimore tomorrow to take eastern Republican leaders for a cool boat ride on the Chesapeake Bay.

Among those who have accepted invitations are Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, and George H. Moses, former Republican floor leader in the Senate.

The talk of Gov. Nice for Republican presidential nominee, which has grown some during his Western trip, has nothing to do with the invitations, according to William P. Lawson, chairman of the Maryland Republican committee, who invited the guests for Gov. Nice.

Gathering to "Escape Heat."

"This is just a little informal gathering of prominent Republicans in the East," Lawson said. "Gov. Nice thought it would be nice to ask them to enjoy a week-end of rest, fishing and cruising on the bay. It will give them a chance to get away from the excessive heat, too."

Among the other Republicans who will seek a rest on the State yacht Dupont are the secretary of the Republican national committee and two former secretaries of former Presidents, George Dekein, secretary of the committee, has accepted, so have Lawrence Richey, secretary to President Hoover and E. T. Clark, who served in a similar post under the late President Coolidge.

D. C. Leaders to Be Present.

Others who have agreed to be aboard the Dupont when she leaves Baltimore Saturday morning are:

J. O. Henson, Martinsburg, W. Va., banker and Republican leader in that State.

Kingman Brewster, Washington, Republican leader.

George R. Norris, of Baltimore, member of the Maryland Racing Commission.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State Roads Commission.

John L. Robertson, another Republican leader.

William G. Albrecht, chairman of the Board of Election Supervisors of Baltimore City.

Dr. Joseph I. France, former United States Senator.

Col. McWilbur Miller, chairman of the Maryland Milk Control Commission.

Judge Marion Humphreys, of Salisbury.

Thomas Parran, who bulks large in the Republican councils in Calvert County and Southern Maryland.

Invitations have been issued to a number of other Republicans in nearby States, but their answers have not been received.

Hoover Talk Shunned 'Ambitions,' Nice Says

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, returning from a visit with former President Herbert Hoover at Palo Alto, Calif., said today their talk "had nothing to do" with "personal ambitions."

"Our talk was looking only to the restoration of the country to a constitutional form of government instead of a Rooseveltian czarism."

Also aboard the train was Gov. Clyde Tingley (Democrat), of New Mexico. The conductor introduced the two.

The Governor declined to disclose what, if anything, the former President said about being a presidential candidate in 1936.

Traction Improvements Planned for Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 25.—Lucius S. Storrs, president of the Baltimore Transit Co., today announced final plans for a program to improve the city street car system.

Immediate steps to be taken will include the rebuilding of seven stretches of track; purchasing 25 of the new type of buses for the Bath street viaduct; equipping Wilkins avenue with 25 trackless trolley cars, and the purchase of 25 modern noiseless electric rail cars.

Boy Critically Wounded.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Oakland, Md., July 25.—Sherman Aronholt, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Aronholt, Swanton, Md., is in critical condition at Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser, from a bullet wound inflicted yesterday. He and companions were playing with a gun when it was discharged. The bullet entered the upper part of his abdomen, coming out the back.

Police Tracing Woman's Voice As Death Clew

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 25.—A series of mysterious telephone calls to police here concerning the body of a well-dressed man today sent Baltimore officers in search of the woman who made the calls.

The body was found Tuesday in a cow pasture near the Philadelphia road, with bullet wounds in the heart and in the head. The medical report said either would have caused death. The man clasped a pistol in his right hand.

Four or five calls were received at the northwest police station immediately after the finding of the body. The woman, said to have a cultured voice, was reported to have suggested the man might be the member of a wealthy New York family.

Coroner Paul Schenker asked police to find the woman for questioning. Northwest police said the only clew to the identity of the man was a label of a New York tailor in his clothes.

U. S. Aid Forecast For Water Project

Winchester Allotment Will Be Made Soon.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 25.—That the application of Winchester for a Federal grant of $239,000 for development of a new source of water will receive approval of Federal authorities "within the next few days" was the information obtained here today from a reliable source.

The project, which calls for a total expenditure of $532,000, provides for the development of the headwaters of Cedar Creek and could supply also the neighboring villages of Stephens City and Kernstown with water.

The project calls for employment of 245 men for one year. City officials said today if the project is approved and the electorate gives permission in a special election to issue bonds for the balance of the sum, the employment situation will be solved for a year.

In order to finance the bond issue, it is estimated the present water rate will have to be increased only 2½ cents, which would be more than offset, officials say, by the saving that would be possible through the availability of soft water.

Inquest in Air Crash Fatal to Three Held

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 25.—Reporting to a coroner's jury investigating the airplane crash here Sunday evening, in which Herbert Foreman, Bedford, Pa., pilot, and two passengers, Glenn Calhoun, Bedford, and Charles Leigh, Chambersburg, were killed, Fred Nelson, chief inspector of the State aeronautics commission, said today that the motor of the plane apparently stopped in midair and that the pilot did not attempt to glide to a safe landing.

Three witnesses testified the motor stopped before the plane went into a spin.

Marion Ernst, operator of the airport, said that he had warned the pilot not to take up passengers because of restricted privileges under his limited commercial license. The coroner's jury did not fix blame for the accident.

House Votes Grading Bill On Tobaccos

Measure Now Goes to Senate With Clause for Compulsion.

By the Associated Press.

Compulsory Government grading of tobacco on markets where two-thirds of the growers favor it was approved yesterday by the House.

Approval came on a voice vote.

Opposition crumbled when proponents of the bill, by Flannagan (Democrat), Virginia, defeated by a 70 to 55 standing vote an amendment to eliminate the compulsory feature even though Government grading was wanted by two-thirds of the farmers.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

The grading service is designed to prevent speculation in tobacco and unfair manipulation of prices.

Representative Flannagan said the measure will be of "more benefit to the ordinary tobacco grower than any legislation in his behalf yet enacted."

"I am entirely satisfied with the bill as the House passed it," the Ninth Virginia District Representative said. "As it passed it was practically as the committee reported it."

Without estimating the financial benefits, Representative Flannagan said it will "put more money into the tobacco farmers' pockets."

As the bill passed it carried two amendments proposed by Representative Burch, of Martinsville, in the heart of the Virginia tobacco section. One provided for a referendum among groups of tobacco growers and another placed the entire cost of the bill's grading provisions on the Federal Government.

Firemen End County Session With a Parade

Bargagni, of Washington, Speaks at Frederick Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., July 25.—Contests followed by a parade over the principal streets concluded the first annual convention of the Frederick County Volunteer Firemen's Association in session here since yesterday.

Companies of the city and county and from adjoining towns took part in the parade. The procession was headed by the American Legion Drum Corps, followed by Mayor Lloyd C. Culler and the city officials, officials of the fire companies and out-of-town guests in automobiles. The parade was reviewed by a judge from a stand in front of city hall.

The route was decorated with flags and the national colors. Street dancing followed.

Reports and addresses featured the final business session. Charles P. Mort, president of the Emmitsburg Company and new president of the association, was authorized to appoint a committee to consider an insurance plan available to volunteer firemen for aid in cases of accident or death. All companies were urged to incorporate. Announcement was made of the firemen's annual carnival in Middletown, August 29, 30 and 31. By a vote of 12 to 14 Thurmont was chosen over Myersville for the next quarterly meeting of the association this fall.

Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, of the Washington Fire Department, gave an address on "Ventilation." With a small house, toy firemen and miniature equipment, he demonstrated how fires occur and the best method of fighting them. He also described the use of ladders, hose and other equipment and the advantage of attacking a fire in its early stage.

The Independent Hose Company won the hook-up contest opened to fire companies of the city.

Government Relief Purchases Raise Eastern Potato Prices

U. S. Buys Total of 379 Cars to Relieve Virginia, Maryland Growers.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., July 25.—Lower Eastern Shore potato growers are being aided somewhat by the purchase of 134 carloads of cobblers on Monday of this week by the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation. The cars were shipped to New York, presumably for distribution by relief agencies.

The sale was made at $1.25, the quotation accepted by the grower's council after a drastic embargo had driven the price as high as $2.10 per barrel. The reduction was made largely because of mounting demurrage charges on potatoes held in freight cars by slow demand. In an effort to overcome this handicap farm leaders said they are loading only enough potatoes to fill daily orders.

This purchase brought to 379 the number of carloads bought by Government relief officials through the VERA, which has a $350,000 appropriation to aid growers in their price campaign.

Lower Shore growers are expressing anxiety over the fate of the Warren bill, which has been approved by the Senate but has not been acted upon by the House. The measure is designed to place control of the potato crop in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Nearly 7,000 carloads of potatoes have been shipped from the two lower Virginia counties of the Delmarva Peninsula so far this year. The banner shipment of the season was on July 5, when 461 cars were loaded.

Shipments from the Eastern Shore of Maryland have increased during the past few days. Cobblers have been selling from $1.25 to $1.30 per stave barrel, but mostly at the $1.25 figure. Heavy shipments as well as an advance in price are expected during the week.

$426,181 to Go For Road Work In Albemarle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 25.—The roads committee of the local Chamber of Commerce will go to Fredericksburg August 1 to approve at a public hearing the allocation of $426,181 of Federal and State funds for highways in Charlottesville and Albemarle.

Of this total, $175,040 has been designated to improve route 250, the Richmond highway, from Shadwell here. In addition $45,000 was set aside to construct an overpass and straighten the road at Shadwell.

Other work to be done on route 250 includes $75,000 for an overpass at Shadwell, and $80,000 for improvements from here toward Ivy. It is estimated that this amount will carry the work as far as the Farmington Country Club entrance.

The sum of $31,203 has been allocated for municipal projects in Charlottesville. It is believed that this sum will be used to widen West Main street.

The sum of $5,000 was appropriated for the maintenance of roads within the university grounds, and $14,948 was given to the country's secondary system.

Completion of Route 29 was seen with allocation of $75,000 for work around Amherst, and $90,000 for construction within the vicinity of Lovingston, Nelson County.

Route 20, running from Buckingham to Scottsville, this county, was awarded $75,000 for construction. In addition, the Richmond end of Route 250 was given $150,000.

Sheriffs Return Murder Suspect

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., July 25.—John Ellis, 26, was returned to Chestertown today from Seattle, Wash., to await action by the October grand jury of Kent County Circuit Court in the dance-floor killing of Kelly C. Terry last June 29.

Ellis arrived here in custody of Sheriff John N. Bennett, Dr. W. M. Reynolds, a deputy and Deputies William and John N. Bennett, jr., sons of the sheriff. The party made the motor trip to Seattle and return in ten days.

The prisoner, who was traced to the West Coast through a letter he mailed to his home in Chester, Pa., did not resist extradition.

A coroner's jury ordered that William Pruitt, Bel Air, be held for the grand jury, but Pruitt was released under his own recognizance when the widow of Terry said she did not see him near her husband during the struggle which ended in Terry's death.

Beehler Out, But Pushes Relief Work

Continues His Efforts in Washington for FERA Assistance.

By the Associated Press.

Informed that he had been dismissed as West Virginia relief administrator by Gov. H. G. Kump, William N. Beehler asserted yesterday that he would continue his effort to get additional Federal relief funds for the State.

"The receipt of knowledge that I have been fired has not in any way altered my plans," Beehler said.

"I am here on a mission for the people of West Virginia and I am going to work on it to the end."

Earlier in the day, when FERA officials refused additional funds to meet increased relief costs caused by a slack in the coal industry, Beehler sent orders to West Virginia for a drastic retrenchment by the relief administration, but said he would try to get the FERA to reverse its stand.

He said he did not plan to discuss his dismissal with Administrator Hopkins or other officials here.

'Victim of Paralysis' Has Green Apple-itis

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, July 25.—One lad probably would "just as lief" had poliomyelitis as such a pain in the midriff, but his mother was mighty glad it was nothing but green apples.

The boy returned from a stroll to a neighbor's home with a high temperature. With thoughts of the infantile paralysis epidemic strong in her mind, the alarmed mother put him to bed, telephoned another child not to come home, called the children's grandmother and summoned a doctor.

The malady, the physician said after examination, was green apple-itis.

Visitors Watch As Wild Ponies Are Corralled

By the Associated Press.

Chincoteague Island, Va., July 25. In festive mood, citizens of this eastern shore community and visitors watched while 300 wild ponies, rounded up during the last several days from Atlantic Coast Marshlands, were driven into pens for the annual Chincoteague Island rodeo.

Expert riders, resembling in their tactics the "bronc-busters" of western rodeos, busied themselves in separating ponies from their colts, while the bay, black, pinto, dapple gray and white horses milled about in an enclosure 100 feet square.

The pony penning and subsequent horse races and a water carnival were watched by visitors from Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Out across Assateague channel, somewhere in the Marshland, remained a defiant stallion which riders had vainly endeavored to capture for ten days. Members of his kingdom unable to evade the riders combing the marshlands on horseback were made to swim the channel waters from Assateague Island yesterday. Others were brought in from Wallops Beach.

The ponies from each of the Atlantic Coast islands displayed clannish spirit in the big pens, refusing to mingle with those from other islands. Toward all human onlookers they displayed hostility.

The penning of the ponies, which tradition says are the offspring of horses which early settlers placed on the islands to avoid fencing off their marshes on the mainland, opened a holiday program of horse racing and water events.

Retail Study For Virginia Cities Is Set

Check-up Will Be Made by Clerks Drawn Off Relief Rolls.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 25.—The Bureau of Census has selected five Virginia towns as part of its proposed nation-wide survey of retail trade. They are Abingdon, Farmville, Fredericksburg, Hampton and Waynesboro.

An enumeration of all retail business establishments, numbering approximately 280,000 in selected areas, is called for in the survey. 17 large cities and 258 small cities with populations ranging from 2,500 to 10,000 are included in the list.

To Seek Employment Data.

Information will be sought also on employment for June, 1933 and 1935, and on pay rolls and net sales for June 1934 and 1935. The reports will be edited, under the present plan, tabulated and summarized by a clerical force drawn mainly from the relief rolls of Baltimore, where administrative headquarters of the census will be set up.

The survey is proposed as a supplement to current information on chain stores and large independent establishments in order to determine accurately the trend of retail distributions.

55 Stores in Abingdon.

Abingdon has 55 retails stores with total sales of $1,115,000, according to figures for 1933; Farmville, 65 stores, sales being $1,104,000; Fredericksburg, 206 stores, sales $4,665,000; Hampton, 143 stores, sales $2,737,000, and Waynesboro 103 stores sales $1,775,000.

The cost of the census would be borne by work relief funds, the advisory committee on allotments having recommended $293,000.

It also has been announced that the committee recommends that $91,479 be allocated to Virginia for taking a census of business enterprises to relate to the calendar year of 1935, preparatory work beginning immediately.

Washington's Third "Going Native" Revue Scheduled for Aug. 9 at Loew's Fox

New Additions To Large Cast Are Selected

Will Be Biggest of Three; Wanted, a Gen. Sutter; Amusement Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native," will be presented on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater the week beginning Friday, August 9, according to announcement made last night by Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Gene Ford, manager of the Fox, in charge of staging the local production.

In addition to those whose names already have been made public, additional principals have been signed by Mr. Ford, as follows: the Silver Shield Quartet, composed of Henry Nestor, 5001 Fifth street northwest, known as "Washington's singing cop;" Richard Willey, 128 C street northwest; Donald Siegrist, 4338 Chesapeake street northwest, and Luther Bowers, 1824 A street southeast; Ted Valentine, ventriloquist, 1116 Thirteenth street northwest; Adock and Hunter, roller skaters, 1110 Virginia avenue; Jerrey Hess, comedian, 1720 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Julian Cunningham, dancer, 1130 Fifth street northeast, and Susan Hall, singer and dancer, 1419 Parkwood place northwest.

Staged in 22 Scenes.

This year's production will be the most pretentious of the series to date. It will be presented in 22 elaborate scenes. Last year's revue consisted of only 15 scenes.

Scenery already is beginning to arrive in Washington from the Loew studios in New York, where it was put in work some time ago by Mr. Ford. It is hinted that several scenes will be given an added tang of novelty by trick scenery, the nature of which will not be disclosed in advance.

Costumes are being executed by Mahieu, one of New York's most famous masters in costume designing. Measurements of cast and chorus are being taken as rapidly as contracts are signed and it is expected that the complete production will be on hand and ready for use within a period of ten days.

As was the cast last year, Phil Lampkin will be musical conductor of the present undertaking. Special orchestrations and arrangements for the vocal numbers and dances are being made by Elwood Wilson, who was responsible for the arrangements last year and year before.

Is Routining Show.

Mr. Ford, the while all this is going on, is busying himself—busying is the word—whipping the continuities and routines into shape so that a smooth-running and diversified revue may be presented with a cumulative audience effect that will build to a spectacular finale with a real punch.

Since Monday's publication in this space of the then new additions to the cast of "Going Native," it has developed that Marjorie Mitchell, well-known Washington comedienne and dancer, will not be able to appear in this year's production by reason of a call from Eddie Dowling, in New York, to report to him on August 5 for a part in the road company of the musical comedy, "Thumbs Up."

It will be recalled that it was in "Thumbs Up" that Paul Draper, one of the stage's foremost dancers, appeared until shortly before his recent engagement as a vaudeville "single" on the stage at the Earle Theater.

It, no doubt, also will be recalled that Miss Mitchell is following in the footsteps of Kate Smith, it having been Eddie Dowling who gave her her first shot at the big time, when he produced "Honeymoon Lane" and gave her the role of "Tiny Little" in it, in compliment to her slightly ample architecture.

There is another resident of Washington who will be stepping along from the Capital to Broadway one of these days, too, if talent bears any direct relationship to success in the "profession."

That would be Yvonne Lewis, the young titian-haired Australian, who has been a resident of this city for about four years and has been heard from time to time on the air through local stations. Miss Lewis is endowed with an unusually deep and rich contralto voice and was the unanimous first choice at one of Arthur Godfrey's amateur talent broadcasts from the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel last April.

She leaves today for a visit to Los Angeles and, strangely enough, has no ambition to crash any Hollywood studio or to get into the movies by any device whatsoever. Her ambition is to return to Washington, make a name for herself on the radio or stage and go on to Broadway and the heights as so many from this center of artistry and culture have done before her. There is no reason discernible to these dimming eyes why all of her dreams should not come true.

In the meantime, we have armed her with a few letters to folks on the inside in Hollywood, just in case. This young Antipodean has what it takes.

Fame and Fortune Beckon.

Over the convenient facilities of Western Union comes this communication from one of the cinema's veteran producers. No postman rang even once for this one; they just slapped the problem down on my desk and I, therefore, with characteristic generosity, am slapping it right down on yours for whatever suggestion it may be the desire to make.

These public suggestions, if forthcoming, will, of course, be submitted at once to the West Coast. But first here is the wire:

"Knowing your eagerness to assist the industry in developing new talent and with urgent casting problems to be solved within the next few weeks, I appeal to you to help find an actor, with or without screen experience, worthy of an opportunity to play the role of General Sutter in our $500,000 production of 'Sutter's Gold.' This is not a publicity stunt. I know that the right man can win stardom in this one picture and his future be assured. Please oblige me with your consideration of this big opportunity and send me data on actors you suggest, for my personal study. Gratefully (Signed) Carl Laemmle, Universal City, Calif."

To refresh your memory—as I had to my own—General Sutter was the feudal lord of southern California and northern Mexico, who, early in the nineteenth century, held title to enormous acreages of land on which he acted as a sort of benevolent overlord for the entire countryside, both Mexican and Gringo.

Started Rush of '49.

It was while digging a millrace in 1848 that he made the discovery of gold. His attempt to keep his discovery a secret was completely futile. The California gold rush of '49 was the result.

Sutter died in this city in 1880, after the Supreme Court had invalidated his title to 98,000 acres of his land, in an attempt to prevail upon Congress to act favorably upon his claims. The night before his death Congress had adjourned without taking any action on his case.

Now, then, who shall play General Sutter on the screen? I have a few vague preconceptions of my own in the matter, but will be happy to forward public preferences to "Uncle Carl" as rapidly as they are received.

Gracie Barrie, the vivacious young chanteuse who bridged the gap as mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater, between the defection of Maxine Doyle two years or so ago and the permanent appointment of Audrey Sieber, the present picturesque incumbent, and since has frequently appeared on the same stage as featured artiste and substitute m. c., when Miss Sieber has taken her annual "two weeks off, with pay," tomorrow will begin a week's engagement at the Maryland Club Gardens. It is held out as a possibility that Gracie may remain at the popular nearby resort and night spot considerably longer than one week. If she does not, it will be the first time she ever has played a single week's booking in this neck of the woods.

Gracie Barrie was one of the long-run hits at Billy Rose's Casino de Paree in New York, when that unique establishment was the top in Broadway night life. When the money boys decided that they would take the Casino over and run it themselves, one of their ironclad edicts was that all the floor show be fired but Gracie, thus proving themselves real showmen as well as smart business fellers. A nice youngster, Gracie, and can she sing those songs!

Up There, at Last!

This Jane Withers, who comes to the screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow as star of "Ginger," is one of the juvenile actresses who has not popped up among the child prodigies over night. In fact, her present eminence comes after three years of struggle that almost caused her mother to call it a day and give up trying to get her daughter anywhere at all in pictures.

When Mrs. Withers and Jane traveled from the old home town of Atlanta, Ga., to Hollywood—stop me if I'm wrong, Mr. Barron—they started on their transcontinental trek laden with armfuls of letters from scores of important Atlantans.

There was one from the manager of the broadcasting studio where, for a year and a half, Jane had been featured as "The Nuisance"; others were from theater managers, influential citizens and Bobby Jones, Georgia's wizard of the tees, greens, sandtraps and fairways—stop me if I'm wrong, Mr. Herman.

Proved No Open Sesame.

All these credentials, however, proved no open sesame to the studios of Hollywood. Jane, then and her mother met many interesting and polite studio gatemen—and that was all.

Then, when they were just about to call it over and return home, Jane was selected for the part of the "bad little girl" in Shirley Temple's picture of "Bright Eyes" and, as a result of her work in that assignment, won a long-term contract with Fox. So there she is, big as life and twice as natural!

Odd that she and Shirley should be playing against each other here, "day and date," as we say over the booking sheets—stop me if I am wrong, Sarah Young!

And who should come bobbing through the "stage door" of Division Manager Carter Barron's office in Loew's Fox yesterday afternoon, while I was malingering there in air-cooled luxury when I should have been down here gently smouldering over a typewriter, but old Edgar Waite, the demon publicist and pungent playwright, gone unaccountably industrialist and plucker of the plumes, if any, of the Blue Eagle!

Mr. Waite, who seems to have taken on a little since last I saw him, now makes his home in New York, as against his native, or thereabouts, California, and presents himself more or less regularly nowadays in the National Capital for official reasons having nothing whatever to do with paroles or anything of the kind.

The reason I thought you might suspect Mr. Waite of some phenagling with the Department of Justice, or something, was because he used to be a movie press agent and they can be guilty of anything! I know, because I used to be one myself. But Mr. Waite's visits are utterly innocent excursions back to the scene of his former triumphs, for which he gets paid. He will be here through tomorrow and return every Thursday for quite a stretch—pardon, spell.

At heart, he is still a movie press agent. Look at the way he uses that back door to Mr. Barron's office, his old stamping ground. It is the nearest one to the E street refectories!

But the lad still packs a punch—planter's punch, if you have to know everything.

Sudden Realization Note.

Phillipi Depositors To Be Paid $100,000

Phillipi, W. Va., July 25.—Depositors of the Citizens National Bank will be paid $100,000, representing a 15 per cent dividend, as soon as the checks are returned from the office of the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington, according to J. A. Harrell, receiver.

The dividend will bring the total to 58 per cent paid to depositors and will be the fourth since the bank closed in October, 1931.

Harrell is also receiver for the First National Bank at Belington. The Belington bank has paid 62½ per cent.

To date approximately $1,000,000 of assets of the two banks has been liquidated.

Mrs. Cramer Improves.

Baltimore, July 25 (AP).—Mrs. Lawrence W. Cramer, whose husband is President Roosevelt's choice for governor of the Virgin Islands, was reported greatly improved today at the Johns Hopkins Hospital.

On Two Local Screens Tomorrow

Bills for New Show Week to Offer Variety

Screen, Stage and Parks Will Afford Diversity of Amusement.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Shirley Temple, whose hold on the affection and wonder of the world grows with each successive picture in which she is starred, will occupy the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Curly Top," a comedy-drama of the orphanages and Long Island's millionaire colony, embellished with vocal interludes by the stars, John Boles and Rochelle Hudson. Shirley does by far the best work she has brought to the screen in this subject. Arthur Treacher also is an important member of the cast, along with Jane Darwell, Rafaela Ottiano, Itienne Girardot and many more. The bill will be augmented by a new Charley Chase comedy, cartoon and newsreel.

• • • •

"Broadway Gondolier," a light and amusing musical satire on radio business and the source of entertainers for the broadcasting chains, will be the screen feature of the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, with Dick Powell in the title role, surrounded by Joan Blondell, Adolphe Menjou, George Barbier, Grant Mitchell, Louise Fazenda, Ted Fio Rito and his orchestra, the Four Mills Brothers, the Canova Family, William Gargan and scores more. Powell's voice is at its best in this subject. The stage bill will be headlined by Paul Tisen and His Violins, Luis and Gaby, Mexican dancers, and Don Hudson, barytone. Other acts will be presented by Herman Hyde and Sally Burrill, in "A Traversty in Music;" Tommy Martin and The Three Kanes. Newsreel and Freddie Clark's orchestra added.

• • • •

Spencer Tracy will make his debut as a star of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures on the screen at Loew's Fox tomorrow, when he will be seen as the hard-boiled newspaperman who is the principal character in "Murder Man." Surrounding Mr. Tracy will be such favorites as Virginia Bruce, Lionel Atwill, Harvey Stephens, Robert Barrat, William Collier, sr., and Lucien Littlefield. The plot is said to be one of unusual tenseness and suspense. On the stage the bill will be headlined by the "all-American half-wit," Ben Blue, former Washingtonian. The Saxon Sisters will demonstrate their right to the title of "outstanding song rhythmists," the Twelve Aristocrats of Dance will step off their lively measures and the Four Casting Carons will round out the bill. Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin music are supplementaries.

• • • •

Jane Withers, the juvenile "menace" with Shirley Temple in the cast of "Bright Eyes," will be the pictured star of the bill, in her own right, at RKO-Keith's Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when she will be seen in the Fox production of "Ginger." Jackie Searl, one of the most cordially disliked kids in pictures—due to his roles, not to any inherent cussedness—leads the supporting cast, which also includes O. P. Heggie and Katherine Alexander. The story receives its major impetus from Jane's being transplanted from her Ninth avenue home to the Park avenue mansion of the opulent Jackie. Short sound subjects and Pathe News will complete the bill.

• • • •

Grace Moore, Leo Carrillo, Michael Bartlett, Robert Allen, Spring Byington, Luis Alberni and Douglas Dumbrille will reassert their vocal, mimetic and other talents on F street, beginning tomorrow, when "Love Me Forever," Miss Moore's new vehicle, replete with the favorite arias from familiar grand operas, begins a return engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater, after having scored a smash hit recently at the Earle. A cartoon comedy and a full, 15-minute news reel will complete the bill.

• • • •

"Escapade," ostensibly a starring vehicle—and a congenial one—for William Powell, but even more notable as the medium of introducing Luise Rainer to American audiences, will continue its downtown run at Loew's Columbia tomorrow, following an earlier success at the Palace. The two principals are supported by an admirable cast, led by Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen, Virginia Bruce, Laura Hope Crews, Henry Travers and Mady Christians. News events, short sound subjects and comedy will round out the entertainment.

• • • •

There are no snowdrifts or icicles at Glen Echo Park these days and evenings, but there is a temperature consistently lower than that in the city to refresh those who flock to this 40-acre amusement center to enjoy the 50-odd amusements in operation. The favorites are the Crystal Pool, with a capacity of 3,000 bathers, the Spanish Garden ballroom and the swift, thrilling and cooling rides.

• • • •

Next Monday night the Roadside Theater will revive "Trilby," one of the surviving hits of four decades ago. The Du Maurier story, adapted to the stage by Paul Potter, will be played by a notable cost of local Thespians, led by Denis Connell in the role of Svengali and Carey Lucas in the title part. Taffy will be played by Jesse Veitch. The engagement will be for two weeks, with nightly performances, except Sundays.

• • • •

On Tuesday night, July 30, the Washington Community Players will be seen for the third time this season in the National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, in two brief plays, which will be presented after a concert by the United States Navy Band, beginning at 7:30. The Players will be seen in a dance pantomime, "The Flirtation," and "Creatures of Impulse," a gay comedy by W. S. Gilbert. Sterling casts have been assembled for both.

Cameraman

It is the second cameraman who actually works the camera. He's the eye the audience sees. There are two assistant cameramen also on the job. The assistants change the focus, gauge the distance between the player and the camera, load the camera, bring it on the set, etc.

You may wonder then what the cameraman actually does, for he is one of the most important people on the set. Stars will fight for a cameraman more than for a director. Garbo has a clause in her contract demanding Cameraman Bill Daniels. Marion Davies won't make a flicker without Cameraman George Folsey. There are many other stars who have their favorites.

Why is a cemerman so important and what does he actually do? We shall examine one—Gregg Toland. Toland did among other pictures "Les Miserables," "Nana," "We Live Again," "The Masquerader," "The Kid From Spain," "Forsaking All Others" and today finished shooting "The Dark Angel."

• • • •

Toland is in his early thirties. Collegiate looking and took no special course to become a cameraman. Sixteen years ago he quit school because he didn't like it and got a job at the Fox Studio as an office boy. While there he became fascinated by the camera and six months later he was working as a cameraman's assistant. This, he claims, is the best course for becoming a cameraman.

He was an assistant cameraman for eight years and then finally was graduated to the second cameraman class, which might give you an idea how long a course takes, although there is no set time. He was second cameraman on the Gloria Swanson flicker, "The Trespasser."

A second cameraman will often take a unit of the players and shoot scenes, especially if the picture is behind schedule. Or he may do the retakes if the cameraman is already engaged elsewhere. That's how Toland got his chance.

LAURA HOPE CREWS, concerned with "The Trespasser," noticed his work and spoke to Sam Goldwyn. Goldwyn assigned him to "Palmy Days." This was his first picture. Becoming a cameraman depends on the breaks.

When Toland is assigned to a picture he first reads the scenario. Then he gets together with the art director. He has to know the color and designs of the sets. He looks at all the costume sketches. Next he is concerned with make-up tests of the principal players in costume.

The tests of all costumes look different on the screen. The make-up tests are important, for there must be a balanced make-up. If there are four players in a scene, one light must hit four of them so the photography will be of equal density.

Two people being photographed in an ordinary room require on the average 15 units of light. There must be lights to create shadows, background lights, lights to bring out details, such as the hair, etc.

• • • •

In "Les Miserables," to create a mood, Toland used the least amount of light yet used in photographing a flicker. In many sequences he used only two or three lights. Often, to get the desired effect, he lit the walls instead of lighting the people and let the people stand out by contrast. Laughton's full moon face and twitching lips were very dramatic. This was achieved by having a light throw a shadow on Laughton's lips. A shadow accentuates the least motion.

Lighting is one of the main factors in good photography. There are 12 to 15 different types of lights used. It is only after continuous work with an actor or actress that the cameraman knows the best lighting for that player.

Toland photographed Anna Sten for six months before she faced the camera for her first flicker, "Nana." If you could see the first pictures and compare them with how she looked on the screen you would realize what was accomplished.

Toland used a carbon light instead of the usual incandescent light on Sten. This is a hard light and was used to keep her face from photographing too round.

Giants Win, 3-1, 13-2; Drop Cards to Third Place Behind Cubs

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

FOR some time now, the department has been content to leave all expression of righteous indignation to such experts as Pro Bozo Public, Constant Reader, A. Fan, and Indignant Subscriber, but if those gentlemen will yield for a few minutes, I would like to put a word in.

POVICH.

In fact, I feel like spitting on my hands and bearing down. I have been finding it increasingly easy to work myself into a fine state of umbrage at what has been taking place in Germany. By this time it is fairly apparent that Catholics, Jews, and Protestants fit into the Nazi scheme like a pot-shot at Herr Hitler. Herr Hitler's latest purge is taking the form of a persecution of all those denominations not yet ready to accept Naziism as a religion.

My particular pet peeve is that the Nazis are still expecting America to participate in the 1936 Olympiad in Berlin and that they have the face, under present circumstances, to extend the United States team an invitation. What do they want Americans to do, turn the other cheek with their co-religionists still taking a figurative and actual beating under Der Linden?

In the face of what has been going on, American participation in any Olympiad in Berlin would be a cowardly betrayal for all that this Nation has stood for in the way of religious freedom and liberty since, roughly, July 4, 1776. To send an American team to Berlin would be tantamount to approbation of what has been going on in Germany and a pitiful disavowal of the principles of tolerance.

THE Amateur Athletic Union, which holds a powerful voice in any decision of the United States Olympic committee, was almost persuaded last year to reject Germany's invitation to the United States team after revelations of discrimination against Jewish athletes. The resolutions of protest were tabled following vague promises by German athletic officials that there would be no further discrimination.

But now that Catholic and even Protestant organizations have fallen under the fanaticism of Naziism, the United States Olympic committee no longer can ignore the meaning of it all.

Jerimiah T. Mahoney, national president of the A. A. U., already has said that his own vote would be cast against participation in Germany by the American team and further support for antiparticipation people now is, or ought to be a certainty.

The Olympic games are supposed to build up good will among nations, but if that is the chief aim, nothing can be achieved by holding them in Germany, which, apparently, is intent on ostracising itself itself from the family of nations and succeeding very well at it. How the powers in Berlin hope to escape the consequences of their outrages against citizens of Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant persuasion, this department is not prepared to answer.

If you're asking me, the only useful purpose the staging of the 1936 Olympiad in Berlin would serve would be the result accomplished if Herr Hitler were equipped with a pair of 56-pound weights and catapulted into a new broad jump record that would land him at the bottom of the Rhine.

In Short.

BOB JOHNSON'S rapid decline from the American League batting lead is no surprise to baseball men, who have always regarded him as a spring hitter exclusively. Bucky Harris told Cleveland reporters that Heinie Manush needed a change of scenery. And he wasn't referring to the foliage in Washington. Buck Everett is not fighting in Washington because his manager, Jimmy Irwin, says that promoter Joe Turner will not pay him his price. Irwin points out that Everett alone has proven a popular heavyweight in Washington and has built the game up here. And Turner points out that he has lost $3,500 trying to build up such fighters as Everett. Danno O'Mahoney, who announced his engagement to a Cambridge, Mass., nurse, can't get married until he returns to Ireland. And makes arrangements to buy himself out of the Irish army, in which he is still enlisted. Added to Clark Griffith's worries is the civil war among his minor league farms. Both Albany and Chattanooga are beseeching him for talent and are continually at odds with Griffith and each other as a result of Griff's attempts to satisfy both. Art Shires, manager of the Harrisburg Club, yesterday sent a frantic plea to George Brandt, Washington youth, to join his club. Brandt, a fur-letter man at Central High School and North Carolina University, recently voluntarily retired from organized baseball to accept a position with the Goodyear Rubber Co. Shires wants him to play third base. Discussing Brandt yesterday, Clark Griffith was reminded that the lad didn't make good with Chattanooga. "That's a great recommendation for him," said Griff. "I might still win the pennant with ballplayers they have released down there. They let Jake Powell get away from 'em, saying he'd never make a ballplayer."

German Religious Upheaval Causes Olympic Difficulties

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 25.—There is a very curious situation developing with regard to the forthcoming Olympic games at Berlin next winter and summer. The U. S. State Department may tell Mayor LaGuardia to award the Nazi rubber-downer his city license to act as a masseur, but if the Olympic committee and the A. A. U. decide to withdraw America's entry to the Olympic games, thereby incensing the practically self-incensing Germans, and causing bad international blood, the Government can not do a thing about it, because, first to last, American Olympic participations is a private venture, supported by voluntary contributions.

Ours, I believe, is the only government that does not pay the way of its athletes to these four-year world sports congresses. And for the first time it may prove a little embarrassing. In a recent interview, Judge Jerry Mahoney, president of the A. A. U., was quoted as saying that if and when a resolution to withdraw from the games comes to a vote at the Olympic meeting in December, he for one will vote to withdraw.

This withdrawal, if it comes, will represent the opinion of a private body of sportsmen, among which are Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Methodists, Baptists and probably a few Free Thinkers. But it will be very difficult to convince the German people that this withdrawal is not a definite Government slur and criticism by high State Department authority, particularly if Der Fuehrer would like to have his subjects gather that opinion.

It won't be, "A. A. U. withdraws from Olympic games." It will be, "America withdraws from Olympics." Our own headlines will carry it that way. And yet beyond dropping a gentle hint as to what it would like, there is nothing that the Government of the United States can do one way or the other. The Olympic committee and the Amateur Athletic Union will decide, and no one else. And my guess is that if Jerry Mahoney should decide to push withdrawal, withdrawal it will be. It shouldn't be very hard to put over.

The Olympic games are the most trying and difficult of all sports events, anyway, even under the best of conditions. It would seem to me more the part of wisdom and discretion if the World Olympic Committee were to take a hand and call the whole show off owing to unsettled political and social conditions within the Reich.

Papa Baer Growls: 'Buddy Won't Marry!'

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., July 25.—Max Baer's marital ventures have taught Papa Jacob Baer a lesson. He put his foot down today on the idea of the younger of his sons, Buddy, getting married before he is through with prize fighting.

Young Baer recently confided to friends he was engaged, or practically so, to a Chicago girl.

"Look what happened to Max, going off and getting himself wedded," said Papa Baer. "Fighters shouldn't be married. It's nothing but a lot of grief. I've laid down the law and Buddy listens to what I say."

New Yorkers Leading by 3 Games

Parmelee Is Effective in Finale; 17-Hit Attack Routs Slab Foes.

By the United Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 25.—The New York Giants, goats of the National League pennant race a week ago, evened an old score with sweet revenge today by twice humbling the St. Louis Cardinals, 3 to 1 and 13 to 2, thereby increasing their league leadership to three games over—yes, the Chicago Cubs.

By today's double defeat of the Cards, coupled with Chicago's 4-to-2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers, the Giants forced the Frischmen into third place, .001 behind the crew of Charley Grimm.

The standings:

Team.	W.	L.	Pct.
New York	57	30	.655
Chicago	56	35	.615
St. Louis.....	54	34	.614

28,500 Watch Games.

A crowd of 28,500 fans witnessed the complete rout of the Cardinals. The first game was bad enough when Hal Schumacher and Allyn Stout held them to five hits, one run, while Paul Dean was blasted from the mound in the fourth.

But the second Giant victory, their fourth in six games, was a complete reversal of the recent form of both teams. The Giants rained hits, driving Bill Hallahan out after six runs in the third. Al Eckert, a House of David recruit, relieved him and presented the Giants with four more in the fourth. Le Roy Parmelee went the route for the Giants.

Parmelee held the Cards to nine widely scattered hits, including a home run by J. Collins in the eighth, and a brace of singles in the ninth which drove in another Cardinal who had walked.

Collect 17 Hits.

A sample of the second game—the six-run rally in the third—tells the story of the Gianis' return to form and the Cardinals' abysmal collapse.

Critz singled. Terry was safe on Durocher's error. Leiber walked. Critz scored on a wild pitch, Terry and Leiber advancing. Ott struck out. Jackson walked, filling the bags. Terry and Leiber scored on Durocher's second error, Jackson reaching second and Danning first. Bartell singled, scoring Jackson. Parmelee was thrown out. Moore, tripled, scoring Danning and Bartell. Eckert, relieving Hallahan, forced Critz to roll to Durocher for an easy out.

Leiber Starts Rally.

The story of the first game is a story of three runs—the one Cardinal run didn't matter. Paul Dean had been doing pretty well until the fourth, when successive singles by Leiber and Jackson, a wild pitch, a double by Danning, a sacrifice and Schumacher's double completely undid the Frischmen.

By the end of the fifth, through which Dean managed to last although the bases were loaded, the Giants had nicked him for a total of nine hits. They got two off Jess Haines, who relieved Paul, and one off Bill Walker, who hurled the ninth.

Schumacher allowed only four hits during the six innings he worked. He was forced to retire then by a sudden attack of heat prostration. Allyn Stout succeeded him and granted the Cardinals one hit.

Cubs Win, 4-2; 19th Victory In 22 Tilts

Chicago Defeats Dodgers Fifth Straight Time; Gain 2d Place.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 25.—The Cubs continued their threatening attitude toward first place in the National League today by belting over the Brooklyn Dodgers for the fifth time in succession, 4 to 2.

The triumph gave Chicago a record of 16 victories in 19 games against the invading Eastern clubs of the circuit and 19 in the last 22 starts. Brooklyn won only 6 games and lost 12 in its tour of the West which ended today.

The Cubs went into second place in the league standings, ousting the St. Louis Cardinals, who dropped to third as a result of their double defeat by the Giants.

Tex Carleton turned in a neat five-hit pitching performance to check the Dodgers, giving up only one blow in the first six frames, then easing up when the game was safely won. Two doubles by Sam Leslie spoiled a shutout. Sam hit the first in the seventh inning and scored on singles by Danny Taylor and Ralph Boyle. In the eighth he doubled again to drive in Len Koenecke.

Little Is Felicitated Again by Roosevelt

W. LAWSON LITTLE, Jr., only American ever to win two successive British Amateur golf championships, was received at the White House yesterday and congratulated by President Roosevelt for his smashing victory at St. Anne's.

The burly, bronzed Californian talked for ten minutes with the President, who appeared to be particularly interested in Little's golf career. Little told the President he was lucky to escape with a 1-up victory over his English rival, Dr. William Tweddell, explaining that his path to the 1934 title was filled with many obstacles.

His Second Visit.

It was the second season Little had been felicitated by the President. Last June, shortly after the National Open, the champion brought the historic British trophy into the President's offices and proudly displayed it.

Looking in the pink of physical condition, the Pacific Coast lad was the cynosure of all eyes as he walked around the White House. He spent considerable time with one of the President's secretaries, Marvin H. McIntyre, an ardent golfer. Steve Early, also of the secretarial staff, was out of town. Little was to have been Early's guest in a round of golf at Burning Tree.

Late in the evening the 24-year-old American-British champion went out to Burning Tree and played nine holes with Joe Davis, club president; John Brookes and Roy Deebe. With little or no difficulty he shot a 35, one under par. He was greeted by Wiffy Cox, new Kenwood pro, and Walter Cunningham, pro at Burning Tree.

Little, who registered at the Mayflower Hotel, left last night for New York. He said he would go to Chicago to spend several weeks under the tutelage of Tommy Armour. He plans to stop over at Cleveland and play the Country Club course, scene of the National Amateur in September.

"About 15 or 20 to 1. You know, there will be some 900 golfers all over the country playing in the sectional trials, and about 200 of 'em are derned good golfers. Any one of those 200 is capable of beating me."

All Will Be Tough.

"It would be impossible for me to name any one or even several players I consider my most dangerous challengers," Little stated. "All of them will be tough."

Little said he had played only one round since the British Open. That was at Winged Foot.

"It was the first time I'd played with the American ball and on the American greens in several months," he said. "Yet, I had a 38, 1 over par, with three-putt greens on the first nine, and came home in 32, 3 under."

Pirates Beat Phils For Eighth in Row

Red Lucas' Single, Bases Filled, Decides Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 25.—The Pirates ran their winning streak to eight straight today, turning back the Phillies, 9 to 8, with a three-run ninth-inning rally. Pinch-Hitter Red Lucas broke up the slugfest with a two-run single with the bases loaded.

The game produced a total of 24 hits, including Dolph Camilli's eighteenth home run of the season, four triples and seven doubles. The Phils lost an early lead when Johnny Pezzullo grew wild in the fourth and Lloyd Waner tripled with the corners crammed. They forged ahead again in the eighth and in the ninth with pairs of runs. In the home half of the ninth Arky Vaughan doubled and Pep Young tripled, then Relief Pitcher Curt Davis loaded the sacks by hitting Tommy Thevenow with a pitch and walking Gus Suhr before Lucas came up.

Schmeling Due To Decide on Foe Today

Joe Jacobs Back in U. S.; Cables Fighter Bids; Favors Louis.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Joe Jacobs, the little man with the big car, bounced off a transatlantic liner today in charge of Max Schmeling's heavyweight future. He bounced to Madison Square Garden for one offer, to the Twentieth Century Sporting Club for another, bounced back and forth again and tonight was still bouncing around, no nearer a decision than he was when the boat landed.

"The Garden has made me a fine offer for Schmeling to fight Max Baer," he said, "and the Twentieth Century Club also gave me a fine proposition for a fight with Joe Louis. I like the second because I think Schmeling and Louis will draw about $800,000 where Schmeling and Baer won't do over $200,000.

"I've cabled all the dope to Schmeling for decision, and I expect an answer from him in the morning."

Meet Incoming Liner.

So anxious are the rival promoters for the German puncher's services that Jimmy Johnston, representing the Garden, and Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Club, both made the dawn cutter down the bay to the incoming liner Washington, though both were still asleep reaching quarantine.

The duel started as soon as the promoters got aboard. First one dragged Joe off in a corner, then the other grabbed him, and he bounced back and forth between

Nats Checked By Rain, Off For N. Y.

Meet Yankees in Three-Game Series; Red Kress at Short.

THE eyes of the American League again will be on the Nats today. But the Washington club is not occupying the spotlight because it is that kind of a ball team. For the next three days, the Nats will be basking in the reflected glory of the New York Yankees whom they battle in a three-game series in New York over the week-end.

Any little thing the Nats contribute to the Yankees' lead will be appreciated by the Yanks at this time, what with the hot breaths of the second-place Tigers now being uncomfortably felt by the collective necks of the New York club.

Their scheduled game with Cleveland yesterday rained out, the Nats departed for New York last night in the role of despoilers. With their own first-division hopes in the rigor mortis stage, the Nats can only hope to bring ruin to the Yankees' ambitions. But thus far this season, the Washington club has been the particular prey of the Yankees. In 12 games between the two clubs, the Yanks have made away with 9 of 'em.

Qualify for Cut.

If the Yankees maintain their superiority over the Nats by that ratio, and succeed in beating off the Tigers for the pennant, then the Nats will qualify for a share in the Yanks' world series cut.

Manager Bucky Harris, hard put for pitchers, will return Ed Linke to the mound against the Yanks in today's series opener. Buck Newsom will pitch Saturday's game and young Millard Hayes will make his Yankee Stadium debut on Sunday.

Harris will present a revised infield for the New York series. Red Kress, who won his way back to the majors Wednesday afternoon with a story-book comeback after being released to Chattanooga during the morning, has been installed at shortstop.

The annual charley horse now being suffered by Cecil Travis is expected to keep the young third baseman out of the line-up for a week, and thus Harris is moving Ossie Bluege to his former third base job and reinstating Kress at shortstop.

While the Yankees are battling the Nats, the Tigers will be occupied with the Cleveland Indians in four games.

Ste. Louise Wins Again at Suffolk Downs for Track Mark

Noveau Riche Runs 2d by Length

Stout Unwraps Filly in Stretch as Crowd of 14,000 Watches.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 25.—Winning her second consecutive victory a week to the day from her last win, Ste. Louise, bay filly from the stable of Mrs. C. R. Crane, today sped the 5 furlongs of the Groton, the off-day feature, in 0:59.3 for a new track record over the lightning-fast oval.

The courageous filly had a length on Vanderbilt's Noveau Riche, which in turn was two lengths to the good of Sobriety, another color-bearer from the Sagamore Stable.

Noveau Riche went to the top early and in the run down the backstretch held command. At the first turn she took command and held it until the field faced the stretch. Here Noveau Riche made one final drive and from the quarter to the sixteenth pole held the lead.

Stout unwrapped the winner and he disposed of the failing Noveau Riche in a stride and was a length to the good at the wire.

The crowd of 14,000 backed the favored Vanderbilt entry heavily, and although the handle for the race was $32,270, there was a minus place pool of $241. The winner paid $6 for a straight ticket and the Vanderbilt entry returned $2.20.

Empire City, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—The white and cherry James Butler silks were borne to their first success since the death of the master of East View Farm when Caught, a gelded son of Sting, galloped through the mud to win the fourth race by eight lengths in the rain here today. Representing "Young Jim," who now carries on in his father's footsteps, the $1,500 plater made his third start of the meeting and rewarded those who backed him from 4s down to 2s.

Mrs. Louise Viau's Bull Fighter, the 13-to-10 choice, just got up on the inside to nose out Son o'Sting, another Butler-bred horse, for the place. Caught covered the short 6 furlongs distance in 1:12 in leading nine other non-winners to the wire.

Caught and Bull Fighter were the only two that drew serious consideration from the figure players. Caught had shown improvement his last outing and the third time proved the charm. Bull Fighter was ridden by little Willie Horn, a nephew of the former rider, Johnny McTaggart, who got his start at Aqueduct. As in his last attempt on Bull Fighter, Master Horn had to be satisfied with second money and has yet to ride a winner.

Caught rushed into a long lead after breaking well in a bad start. The gelding just toyed with his field, winning as Kempton Knott pleased. Bull Fighter, away a bit slowly, made up ground on the inside, but had no chance to catch the Butler-ite.

PRETTY PATRICIA, away slowly and outrun for almost the opening half-mile, began moving up on the outside, came to the inside in the stretch and, fortunate to gain clear sailing, wore down the leaders and was going away at the end. ARGOAN, hustled to the front in the opening strides, drew clear, was rated nicely in front under slight restraint, held on stubbornly when placed under punishment, but was unable to cope with the closing challenge of the winner. THE HARE, under slight reserve early, came in determined fashion through the final furlong. FESTOON, well placed, was unable to improve her position under punishment.

JUBILARGO displayed speed from the start, showed the way under stout restraint for the first half-mile, drew out steadily rounding the far turn and was never threatened. DARK ZENI, steadied along behind the pace, moved up gamely on the outside in the last few furlongs and held on stanchly to the end. QUEEN HELEN, a forward factor for the first six furlongs, weakened under punishment in the last quarter-mile. WAYWARD SON, a trailer early, closed some ground. SILENT DON was never able to improve his position. YANKEE PRINCE had good speed, but stumbled nearing the half-mile ground and dropped back gradually thereafter.

STE. LOUISE, away fast, surrendered the command to NOUVEAU RICHE, went up on the outside entering the stretch, wore down the leader and, hard ridden, drew out at the end. NOUVEAU RICHE went prominently placed all the way, took command nearing the far turn, held on gamely under pressure, but was unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. SOBRIETY, within striking distance of the leaders, was never able to improve his position under punishment. TORITA went well placed all the way. Welsh and McElvenny Win Way to Public Parks Tennis Final

Tony Latona And Breese Defeated

AMID the frequent sputter of verbal fireworks, Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny banged their way decisively into the final round of the annual Public Parks men's tennis championships yesterday at Rock Creek Park.

Although the sputtering was less apparent in McElvenny's 6—2, 6—4 victory over Bill Breese than in Welsh's 6—4, 6—1 victory over Tony Latona, McElvenny, as usual, encouraged himself with his characteristic monologue. As is more unusual, both Welsh and Latona colored the air with exclamations of one sort or another during their brief but rather tense engagement.

Welsh and McElvenny will clash for the title at 3 p. m. Sunday.

This afternoon a pair of smashing semifinal doubles matches is scheduled. In the headliner at 5 p. m. Welsh and McElvenny, finalists in the National Public Parks championships, collide with Breese, the former Harvard left-hander, and Hugh Lynch, Princetonian of two years ago.

Ritzenbergs Beaten.

On an adjoining court, Bud Markey and Dooley Mitchell, No. 2 seeded team, face the champions of two years ago, Latona and Frank Shore, who pulled their quarter-final match against Nate and Allie Ritzenberg out of the fire yesterday on resuming adjourned action at 1—3 in the third set. The final scores were 6—1, 6—8, 6—4.

The women's finals between Sara Moore and either Bobsey Turney or Kay Johnson will be held at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Miss Moore was forced to three sets in the semifinal against Betty Kronman, finally winning, 6—2, 4—6, 8—6. Mrs. Turney and Miss Johnson will play this morning at 11 o'clock.

FREDERICK, Md., July 25.—Thurmont defeated New Windsor, 5 to 3, and Woodsboro set back Emmitsburg, 5 to 2, in postponed games of the County League played yesterday. The victory moved Thurmont into second place in the pennant race, one game behind Middletown.

Flory, first up, rapped a home run for Thurmont in the first inning and Barnes duplicated the trick for New Windsor in the last half of the same inning. The Mountaineers took the lead in the second frame on doubles by Flory and Greeger which counted for one run. Thurmont clinched the game in the fifth inning when singles by Birely, Ambrose and Leatherman, a fielder's choice and wild pitch gave the Mountaineers two more. New Windsor started a rally in the seventh, but Shaffer, who succeeded Wastler, squelched it.

Emmitsburg gained an early lead, but was tied in the fourth inning. The Lime Burners loaded the bases in the next inning, but Althoff steadied and stranded the runners. Singles by H. Smith and LeGore and doubles by Crum and R. Smith accounting for three runs that clinched the fray for the Lime Burners in the sixth inning.

Crum was nipped at the plate in the fifth inning trying to stretch a single into a home run. Emmitsburg scored its last run in the fourth session when Fleagle hit a long home run to left field.

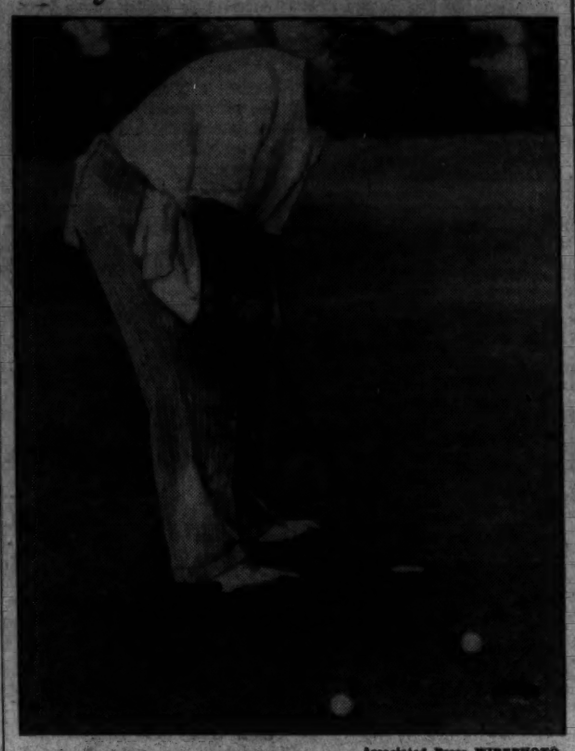
Ruth Gets 81 in Tourney Debut; May Enter National Amateur



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

BABE RUTH, shown on the ninth green at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., yesterday. The former big league home-run king carded a creditable 81, despite a driving rain, to place among the leaders.

By the United Press.

RYE, N. Y., July 25.—Babe Ruth may seek the national amateur golf championship, he indicated tonight after making the most brilliant metropolitan simonpure debut in the history of Westchester Country Club tournament play.

"I wouldn't mind trying for the Cleveland national in September," said the former home run king, "if I could arrange my affairs so that I could compete in the New York qualifying rounds on August 20, and if officials of the U. S. G. A. would let me play."

Rain-drenched Ruth was chatting in the Westchester club's locker room just after completing 18 holes of qualifying play in the annual Westchester Invitation Tourney with an excellent 81, to finish just out of the top flight of 16 who qualified for title play. Ruth was squeezed out of the top flight at dusk when some late 80s were turned in.

Although handicapped by steady rain during this, his first metropolitan amateur golfing competition, Ruth turned in a 40 for the first nine holes, 4 over par, and 41 for the incoming nine, 5 over par. And the most amazing thing about his performance was that he beat out two of the club's ace performers, who played with him in a threesome.

The erstwhile player and official of the Boston Braves turned in a better score than the defending champion, Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., who wound up with 40—42—82, and Bill Meany, former title holder, who declined to turn in his card. They were Ruth's partners.

Even if the Bambino had qualified for match play, he could not have competed tomorrow because of a previous promise to Mayor LaGuardia of New York to open five playground ball parks.

Doubts Permission.

Ruth doubted the golfing association would grant him permission to compete in the National Amateur in view of the association's ruling against Babe Didrikson, famous woman athlete.

"But even if I don't get into the National Amateur, I expect to play in a lot of other tourneys this summer," said the big fellow. "My game is getting pretty good now—and it's a lot of fun."

Edinburg Beats Mt. Jackson Nine, 14-10

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WOODSTOCK, Va., July 25.—Edinburg defeated Mount Jackson today in a loosely played contest, 14 to 10, weakening Mount Jackson's lead in the Shenandoah County League to a scant game. The game was one of the slowest witnessed this season, and much time was taken up by arguments. The game was protested by Manager Holtzman, of Mount Jackson, following a decision by Umpire Morrison, in the sixth frame. Morrison allowed Downey a base after being struck by a pitched ball. Holtzman claimed the batter was in the act of bunting, and the ball should have been called a strike.

Branner started on the mound for the league leaders, and was relieved by Jim Shannon in the sixth, who was battered from the box the same inning by the heavy-hitting Edinburg team after granting six hits and six runs. Litton relieved Shannon and limited Edinburg to one run in three innings.

Irwin Goes Route.

Ford Irwin, veteran right-hand flipper of the Edinburg team, went the route, allowed 12 hits and fanned a half-dozen batters. St. Clair, newly acquired star of the Edinburg team, led the hitting attack with a triple, a double and two singles in five trips to the plate, while Clem and Dinges each got three blows. H. Myer was the heavy stickman for the losers, getting two hits in three trips.

As a result of the game, Woodstock is now trailing Mount Jackson by one game, and Strasburg remains two games behind.

Limited Duck Season Is in Prospect

By Dillon Graham.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

HUNTSMEN, polish up your guns, there's going to be duck shooting this fall.

That is, there'll be an open season on ducks if Secretary Wallace and President Roosevelt approve present plans of the Biological Survey.

Although no official confirmation has come from the authorities, it has been learned that a "very limited" season is in prospect, quite a bit shorter than the 30-day period of 1934. Too, the regulations under which the ducks may be shot will be different from last year.

The proposals of the Biological Survey will be presented to Mr. Wallace and Mr. Roosevelt within the next few days and an official pronouncement will be forthcoming soon.

Many Questions.

J. N. (Ding) Darling, bureau director, has been deluged with queries from gunners and hunt clubs as to his plans for the season. They do not know whether to buy their licenses or whether to make plans to keep their clubs active. Darling realizes their problem and is rushing ahead with his recommendations.

Because of the depleted state of the duck species, estimated at not more than 20,000,000 birds, numerous organizations have urged that the season be closed. A plea for a closed season was made a short time ago by the Audubon societies.

The Audubon representative said the migratory waterfowl restoration program of the Biological Survey, under which large areas are being bought and turned back to the use of ducks and geese, was inadequate without protection during the approaching season.

States Need Funds.

One trouble with a closed season is that without the sale of licenses many State law enforcement organizations would be without funds. It would be impossible for the 45 Federal wardens to patrol the country. More birds probably would be lost outside the law than with a limited season.

Reports from the Northwest, central Illinois to western Montana, are that water conditions are much better. Ducks, which were forced last year to go into Canada, are nesting in this sector now. They are widely scattered, however, and thick at no one place.

There admittedly are two sides to the question, but it has been learned that plans now call for a limited open season.

Errors Feature Opening Second-Half Game.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orange, Va., July 25.—Orange dropped its first start of the second half here today to Culpeper, 8 to 3, in a wild melee of hits, errors and bonehead baseball.

The champions fell on Smith, starting hurler for Orange, in the second, driving over four runs on six hits and an error. Two were added in the third on Win Brown's homer, successive singles by Lacy and Metheny, and a fielder's choice. In the seventh, Culpeper scored its last two markers on a hit batsman and Lacy's fourth smash.

Copeland Lands Bass In Ox Camp Vicinity

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, W. Va., July 25.—Clear, and in condition for fishing for the first time this season, the South Branch in the vicinity of the Fox and Ox Camp, near here, was fished by a number of sportsmen last week-end, the largest bass being caught by Lloyd Copeland, of Morgantown.

Copeland landed a 19-inch smallmouth bass, weighting 3½ pounds. It was caught above the Fox and Ox on artificial bait. A 3-pounder was landed by a man from Fairmont, and on Sunday, before the stream became muddy following a downpour of rain, W. E. Harris and party, of Clarksburg, caught seven bass, the average weight being 1¼ pounds.

Out Fishin'—

By Jack Hawley.

EVERY statesman has his code of living and, brother anglers, how that code does vary, especially when said statesman goes out with rod and reel and expects to knock 'em dead, regardless of methods used or the number caught and particularly the disposal of said fish; so, it is fitting to go back a little and bring into play the finest creed of them all and let's stick to it.

Nothing was ever gained by misinformation to anglers that look forward to that Saturday or Sunday of relaxation that is every angler's reward for the efforts that he has put out for his loved ones for the previous five days of hard work and especially in this hot weather. This column is going to be devoted to the anglers that are interested in facts on where to go when the fish are hitting in fine style, and not where prices are predominant and results are poor.

The best bet for this week-end is Point Lookout and all places south as far as Messick, Va. This includes such game fishing as bluefish, bonito, channel bass (in the minority), ling and exceptionally large hardheads or croakers. Above these points (north) mostly hardheads and small blues with an occasional spattering of weakfish or trout. Hardheads are running small, but with the change of the moon you can count on the return to form of the big ones.

Probably the best spot for the fellow that can afford the trip and expense (and time) is to journey down to Ocean City, Md. I have just received an authentic report of one day's fishing for the master of them all—the bluefish—460 bluefish caught by six parties in one day. The largest catch was 99 in one boat. The name of the captain upon request.

Capt. Taft Tippitt, of Ridge, Md., informs us that the blues are very numerous around Southwest Middles, and especially between buoys No. 14 and 16. Capt. Tippitt knows his stuff, but is hard to contact for week-ends. The best bet is to get him between Monday and Friday and have no regrets. He, like a few others that will be mentioned later, get them if you can stand the gaff of strong wrists and tireless back.

In this column I'm going to stand for the principles of clean fishing and honest facts and especially for the chap that wants to fish but somehow his budget keeps him from getting out without taking it away from those he loves. That is the kind of chap this column is going to try and help get out more often and I will soon put forth a plan that will enable all to get in that trip without eating the tablecloth the following week.

Tri-City Pilots Seek Honors In Regatta

Crawford, Bagley, Hafner Prominent Drivers in Annual Event.

FOR the first time in the history of the Tri-City Regatta, the affair this year will assume a tri-city aspect as drivers from Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis compete in the affair to be held tomorrow and Sunday at Herald Harbor, Md.

Awarded the 225-cubic inch hydroplane Maryland State championship this year, three crack racers from the three cities after which the regatta is named will answer the gun in what promises to be the most spectacular water race in years.

Ednandy III to Compete.

Washington will be represented by the record-breaking Ednandy III, powered by a special Lycoming motor and driven by Andy Crawford, Washington's motorboat entrepeneur. Crawford last year really started an argument—which is to be settled at the regatta—when he employed Walter Leveau, chief of the Dodge designing department, to plan a special motor for the Ednandy III.

Once the Ednandy was finished, Crawford romped away with the Virginia Gold Cup and showed the wake to Mortimer Auerbach's famous Emancipator II in the Atlantic City classic.

From Baltimore will come Dr. Cecil Bagley, prominent sportsman, with his Wilmer III. Bagley defested Crawford in the Shrine regatta, but the local enthusiast was not piloting his new speedy craft at the time.

Hafner to Pilot Boat.

Howard Hafner, of the Severn River Yacht Club, will represent the Annapolis district. Hafner has had a special craft designed and built by the Ventnor Boat Works. Dubbed the Howdy III, Hafner's craft is declared the last word in Ford-motored craft. In the first heat of the Havre de Grace meet last Saturday, Hafner ran away from the entire field for three-quarters of a lap. The terrific speed then took its toll and his engine died before he completed the lap. He was far ahead of the world record mark at the time.

The 255-cubic inch Maryland State championship is scheduled for tomorrow, the opening day of the regatta.

Many Washington sportsmen have arranged to have their yachts and cruisers on the Herald Harbor course for the week-end of competition. Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton, Thomas T. Keane, Dr. G. Bache Gill, Stanley Horner, Andrew Crawford and many others have made arrangements for anchorage.

Wheat Is Steady Despite Damage

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 25.—Flattening out of general public speculative demand tumbled wheat prices back today from 2 cents a bushel rise that resulted from sensational crop damage developments.

Official reports indicated 50 to 75 per cent crop losses in big areas of domestic spring wheat States, and one unofficial estimate put the aggregate probable damage at 100,000,000 bushels, as compared with Government July 1 estimates of yields. Active buying, however, proved transient, notwithstanding that Minneapolis quotations showed temporarily a rise of 12½ cents from yesterday's low point.

Wheat in Chicago closed steady at the same as yesterday's finish to three-eighth higher, September, 86¼@86¼; Corn, ⅜@1¼ down; September 75⅝@75¾; oats, ⅛ off to 1 cent up, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 12 cents gain.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

	Thur.	Wed.
Advances	211	362
Declines	396	221
Unchanged	179	194
Total issues	786	777

Stocks—General steadiness in the early hours gave way to a headlong decline during the final 60 minutes as profit-taking lopped off fractions to around 2 points. Rails and industrials felt the blow heaviest, while utilities also got a few knocks. The last few minutes witnessed signs of returning support. One million three hundred thirty-seven thousand seven hunderd sixty shares were sold.

Bonds—Moved by fits and starts and closed about even on plus-and-minus signs. Federals were very active although not especially enthusiastic about the expected offerings of $100,000,000 in 2⅞s on Monday. Industrials appeared to have the edge, while the majority of rails divided honors. Utilities got nowhere. Italians got some support after yesterday's break but were still far below the previous day's tops.

Curb—Moderate selling carried most of the list lower. Pittsburgh Plate Glass was the exception with a 2-point rise. Trading was active with approximately 213,000 shares changing hands.

Grains—Despite indicated crop damage, buying power was lacking and wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ higher. Corn was lower and oats were firm. July wheat last at 86, July corn at 83⅛.

Cotton—Prices moved within a narrow range and closed at net declines of 2 to 4 points. July, 11.50.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Santos, No. 4, last at 8, and Rio, No. 7, final at 6¾.

Brokers' Loans Decrease.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City amounted to $880,000,000 during the week ended July 24, representing a decrease of $20,000,000 for the week. The loans for the week ended July 25, 1934, were $838,000,000.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 25.—Stocks went through rather a desultory day Early prices were a fraction higher, but profit taking and the humidity settled over the trading. At the close price changes were well mixed, with more weakness in the last hour than earlier. Bonds werre steady except in the Government list. Commodities were not much changed. September wheat was the same at 86⅛ cents a bushel.

Bonds were unsettled. Some of the Italian section were supported, and others sank rapidly. Industrial bonds were mixed and United States Government sagged. The market apparently was not happy over the announcement of the Secretary of the Treasury that he would auction another $100,000,000 of 2⅞ per cent bonds next week. That confirmed the fears which disturbed the market last week. It was not apparent to Wall Street why the Treasury chose to add a second $100,000,000 to the issue of bonds which already is the largest of any Government description to be outstanding since the days of the Liberty loans.

Money markets gave no indication of any upward change in rate. Rather the tendency appears still to be downward, for all the approach of the credit expansion season. Foreign exchanges marked time most of the day. They awaited with suspense the decision of the Dutch cabinet on budget measures in which perhaps is involved the fate of the present government. The guilder had a good rally, which gave buoyancy to other gold currencies. Sterling was little changed and lire were held firmly around a peg of 8.18 cents, some 20 points above the recent low quotation.

Profit-Taking Appears.

In stocks the mild setback came from a runout of investment buying and a preferance for profit-taking as against new buying by speculators. The length of the advance, without important decline, has made professionals and even some of the ordinary bulls nervous. Investors are not abandoning their commitments to higher industrial activity, but the pace of markets usually is too fast or too slow. Just now the tide of company earnings statements for second quarter and first half year is running strongly. It is supporting recent movements in certain stocks, but does not show enough gain on the whole to create much enthusiasm.

Stock buyers, aside from the search for a good yield, are looking some distance ahead. They are more impressed with the fact that the trend of company earnings now is definitely upward than with the percentage of rise. News of the day was of no great significance. Bank clearings were reported higher for the past week, which probably reflected great interest in securities instead of additions to pay rolls and an expansion of retail and wholesale business. Meanwhile the strike clouds receded and even the foreign position appeared to be at least no worse than it was.

Thin Markets Develop.

As the buying movement subsided many stocks developed thin markets. The resultant price declines were out of proportion to the market's estimate of prospects or to amount of stock offered for sale. Schenley, which recently had advanced a few points, slid down abruptly, and the movement was accompanied by conflicting newsticker gossip of new financing. Lambert turned weak, emulating the recent performance of Lehn & Fink. The shares tumbled 2 points into new low ground and a yield of approximately 14 per cent based on the current $3 yearly dividend. No meeting is scheduled until the early part of September. Atlas Powder, Corn Products, International Cement were other soft spots, with depressions of 1 to 3 points.

A dozen stocks made up about 20 per cent of the trading volume of less than 1,500,000 shares, as usually happens. Radio was the most active stock, but its rise was only a small fraction. Other leaders were Steel, Packard, Chrysler, General Motors, Warner Pictures, Montgomery Ward, Colgate, North American and Consolidated Gas, the latter making a good rally.

With the exception of radio, the amusement issues were weak. Motor accesories sagged a little and the steels receded. Railroad stocks were down small fractions as the June earnings statements showed only a negligible rise in net income, in spite of the higher freight schedule and the activity in some of the heavy industries. Utilities had a firmer tone, but the metals thought less of the outlook for inflation.

Savings Accounts Reach New Peak

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—The number of savings bank depositors has reached the highest point in the records of the National Association of Mutual Savings Bank at 13,896,605, it was revealed today. The gain from the end of last year was 59,630, practically all in New York State, with other areas holding about even.

Total deposits were $9,870,051,120, an increase of $45,711,527 in the first six months of the year, but $160,000,000 below the January 1, 1932, peak recorded by the association, whose data covers the 119-year history of mutual savings banking in the United States. The average amount of each deposit was $710.25 as of June 30, compared with $705.19 at the end of 1934.

Entertainment Data Asked From Brokers

New York, July 25.—The committee of arrangements of the New York Stock Exchange has issued an unexpected call for transcript of all records of member firms' expenditures for entertainment from March 21, 1933, to date.

The call for transcripts of expense records, to be filed by August 5, was made pursuant to a rule of the exchange made in March, 1933, in order to prevent firms from lavishing entertainment upon customers in an effort to get business.

Washington Gas Income Off In First-Half

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Despite an increase in net income during June, the Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported that earnings for the first half of 1935 were still $78,201 below the corresponding period of 1934. Gross income this year was substantially higher.

Increased fuel and labor costs were blamed by officials for the drop in net earnings from $834,777, in 1934, to $756,576 this year. Operating revenues in 1934 were $3,445,137 and increased this year to $3,553,267, a gain of $108,130.

Operating revenue for June of $479,426 compared with $443,573 for June a year ago, an increase of $35,853. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, increased $20,607, this year's figure being $344,176, against $323,569 in June, 1934.

Non-operating revenues for June, this year, increasing $127 from last year's total of $16,430 to $16,557, resulted in a gross corporated income of $151,807, as compared with $136,434, an increase of $15,373.

Interest deductions of $71,847 for June, 1935, were $2,148 more than last year's figure of $69,701, resulting in a net income of $79,960, compared with $66,733 for June, 1934, an increase of $13,227.

Georgetown Gas Light.

A loss during June, but increased net income during the first six months of 1935 as compared with the first six months of 1934, was reported at the same time by the Georgetown Gas Light Co.

A drop in gross revenue of $8,018 from the total of $769,335 reported during 1934, decreased the 1935 revenues to $761,317. Economies in distribution costs and overhead boosted the net income for the period from $1,995 during 1934 to $20,678 in the past six months.

During June the company operated at a net loss of $4,188 as compared with a net loss of $4,182 during the same month of 1934. Operating revenues this June were $85,954, as against $90,360 for June, 1934, a decrease of $4,406. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, decreased $3,812 this year's figure being $86,316 against $90,128 for June, 1934.

This contrasted with a gain of 13.6 per cent for the preceding week. At New York City clearings were $3,608,318,000, an increase of 31.3 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,705,476,000 was 11.4 per cent higher.

Goodrich Funding Approved by Vote

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—Preferred and common stockholders of the B. F. Goodrich Co., of Akron, Ohio, voted approval today of a mortgage not to exceed $45,000,000.

Otis & Co., Cleveland investment banking firm, which has opposed the mortgage plan, challenged the result and succeeded in effecting an adjournment of the meeting until 4 p. m., Eastern day light time, tomorrow to enable election inspectors to examine ballots and give the Otis counsel an opportunity to check proxies with the Goodrich list of stockholders.

With approval by stockholders, Goodrich proposed issuance under the mortgage of $28,000,000 in 4½ per cent bonds, with the proceeds to be used in refunding higher interest rate obligations of its own and of its subsidiary, Hood Rubber Co., and for other corporate purposes.

Although the exact vote could not be learned, the management said that its proposal had been approved by more than 75 per cent of the stock.

Treasury to Offer $100,000,000 More

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday he would sell an additional $100,000,000 of 20-25 year 2⅞ per cent bonds to the highest bidder next Monday.

By selling to the highest bidder, a financing method inaugurated some months ago, the Treasury takes advantage of favorable Government bond market conditions, and by offering its securities on "an auction" or competitive basis, it secures its loan at the lowest possible interest-carrying rate.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign currencies generally assumed a firmer tone in principal exchange trading center yesterday after their recent weakness.

In London the dollar gave ground moderately at 4.96 to the pound, while later in New York the British unit advanced ½ cent at 4.96⅝.

Guilders retraced part of Wednesday's downward course to gain .15 of a cent in New York at 67.45 cents. A similar trend was evident from London, where some of the Netherlands banks were said to be repurchasing guilders sold during the decline.

The French franc moved moderately against the general trend to get down .00½ of a cent in New York at 6.61½ cents. Earlier, in Paris dealings, the dollar had improved to the equivalent of 6.603 cents to the franc.

The lira was a shade firmer in New York at 8.20 cents, up .00⅛ of a cent, while Swiss francs advanced .01 of a cent at 32.64 cents.

Foreign Markets.

London, July 25 (AP).—A quiet but cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange today with most business being done in industrials, gilt-edged securities and transatlantic issues, but the latter did not maintain their best prices. Gold shares rallied, but the sections of the list moved irregularly. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Trading was quiet on the bourse today with rentes slightly lower. Recovery in the Florin weakened Dutch issues while French and Belgian industrials dropped fractionally. The market closed irregular and dull.

Berlin—The bourse opened irregular today and business was small. The closing was firmer.

PWA Ruling Seen as Aiding Foreign Steel

Products From Abroad Have 15% Advantage, Grace Declares.

By the United Press.

New York, July 25.—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethelehem Steel Corporation, told newspapermen today that foreign producers may benefit more than American steel makers from Public Works Administration purchases if a recently promulgated PWA order is carried out. He quoted from an order which he said was issued May 25 to the effect that borrowers of PWA funds must buy their materials abroad if foreign prices are 15 per cent under domestic price on orders of $10,000 or more.

"There is no question," Grace said, "that foreign steel products can be delivered in this country at prices 15 per cent less than the domestic quotations because of the lower labor and other costs aboard. The result of this would be to create unemployment in the steel industry eventually." He added that Bethlehem was protesting against this order.

Grace said that the average wage in the steel industry in this country in May was 65 cents an hour, a 7 per cent increase over 1929, while the hourly wage in England was 37½ cents; in Belgum, 17 cents, and in Germany, 29 cents.

Prices of steel products in this country have declined since 1926 when the average was $37.68 a ton. In the first three weeks of July, 1935, the average price was $32.40. In July, 1929, it was $36.71.

Film Firm Asks $500,000 Cut In Legal Fees

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—A half-million-dollar reduction was requested today by Paramount-Publix Corporation from $3,500,000 counsel fees claimed by attorneys in the corporation's recent bankruptcy and reorganization proceedings.

Other substantial reductions in claims against the corporation by bond and stockholders' committees, trustees and in administrative work were also urged in the hearing which started before Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe.

Former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher, counsel for the reorganized company, recommended a flat $500,000 cut in legal fees, and in referring to large amounts requested by counsel for trustees and for various committees, brought out the point that interested parties had in most cases been compensated through dealings in corporation stock. In this connection he mentioned Frank A. Vanderlip, Barney Balaban, Maurice Newton, Gerald Brooks and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the house of issue of Paramount bonds.

"The very generous estimate of administrative expenses of $2,500,000 set out in the reorganization plan has been enhanced by these petitions to the sum of $4,042,691.92," he said.

Attention centered on developments in the July position during the morning. That delivery sold up from 11.85 to 11.93 and then broke to 11.50 under liquidation just before trading ended at midday.

N.Y. Exchange Acts To Bar French Tax

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—The New York Stock Exchange today acted to aid American holders of French government bonds to avoid the new French bond tax. In accordance with the opinion of French fiscal authorities that the tax was intended to apply only to their own nationals, the stock exchange committee on securities ruled that, on and after July 29, settlement of transactions in French government 7 and 7½ per cent bonds shall be accompanied by an ownership certificate signed by the owner of the bond on July 17.

The certificate is to state that the owner as of July 17, was not a French citizen or a corporation formed under the laws of France.

Club Gardens Will Present Gracie Barrie

Diminutive Star to Find Many Old Friends in Audience.

By Chanticleer.

The place is Maryland Club Gardens.

The time is tonight.

Meaning that Gracie Barrie has left Manhattan Square for the time being and is coming back to meet a lot of old friends she's made over the footlights in the last two or three years in her theatrical appearances in the Capital.

Not since the days of Ken Murray's antics at the Michel has Washington had a chance to eye a personality whose name decorates the 400-watt bulb signs . . . at an after dark spot. If Gracie follows in Murray's footsteps she'll be a decorative addition to the Gardens for a tolerable spell, as we transplanted farmers from the open spaces say.

• • • •

Gracie's appearance sort of puts the bee on the suave and bored Washingtonian who goes around with a forebearing smile and a look of longing in his eye . . . the same one who wishes for something big, grand and noble in evening diversion.

Last winter the diminutive Barrie had them standing along the walls cheering at Billy Rose's Casino de Paree . . . and she usually comes to Washington for a week and remains to see the treasurer come around the third or fourth Saturday night not only with the Barrie pay in his hand, but a pleased look in his eye.

• • • •

So you're all invited tonight to Maryland Club Gardens to see the premiere show of the little girl with the big way about her. And if you can't make it tonight, make it tomorrow night. (If you're a wise guy, you'll ask Gracie to sing "You're a Builder Upper.")

• • • •

Come next Wednesday I'll have a word for you about some goings-on at the Hamilton's Alexander Room. Since the coup isn't ready as yet there's nothing gained in tipping it off . . . but Richard S. Butler, the new manager of the Hamilton, has something pretty nice up his sleeve.

Incidentally, he was put in charge of the hotel only a week or two ago . . . and has the distinction among other things, as a result, of managing the only completely air-cooled hostelry (less one, in Texas), in the United States. He's a product of the Slocum Hotels executive experience . . . and as a native son worked once upon a time for Shannon & Luchs.

• • • •

Over at the Pink Elephant at the Washington Hotel . . . they're taking some 8-year-old Jamaica rum, lemon and grenadine . . . plus some fruit juices and a particularly deft and skillful technique . . . and are turning out a thing beautiful to behold—a Planter's Punch of unimpeachable reputation and authority. Its one of those things that puts the "oh" in oasis.

• • • •

Back in the provinces there is a gag about the Main street boy who goes down to see the trains come in. Here in Washington it's no gag to go down to the Hangar Club and watch the planes come in. There's something about those huge, winged ships . . . sliding down to a landing when the field lights come up . . . that fascinates. The Hangar Club's roof is a grandstand seat for the performance. I believe you could put Ray Noble or Guy Lombardo in the orchestra shell . . . and the customers still would swarm to the rail to see a liner come in.

• • • •

Leigh Windham is getting a generous slice of credit for the appeal of Chevy Chase Lake to Young Washington these days . . . Leigh just sings . . . with no trick affectations . . . and the boys and girls do like her contraltoing with Lee Field and the orchestra . . . And down at the Mayfair Restaurant the ten-week stand of Joe and Jack is testimony to their popularity. . . . Joe Murphy, by the way, is a theater master of ceremonies when he's not at the Mayfair and recently was featured in a Ted Healy show . . . And Jack Reynolds is an old vaudevillian and once was pianist for Estelle Taylor.

• • • •

Sammy Richardson sings a swell new tune called "Blue Bonnet" or something very close to that combination of words . . . at the Gingham Club in the floor show . . . Sammy Curls up the toes of one foot when he sings . . . Bands everywhere at the Arlington Hotel . . . first Ina Ray Hutton's and Jolly Coburn's . . . and, of course, they're like the mail man with a day off . . . they visited Moe Baer and his Club Habana Orchestra on the Arlington Roof when not tooting their own horns on the stage.

• • • •

The Shoreham Terrace has made the Tom Collins passe as a "Swiss Itch" . . . the new concoction being a "Terrace Cooler" . . . but you can also get it in the cocktail lounge . . . The Indian wedding ceremony at River Bend last Sunday evening was so successful that a special feature is being planned for every Sunday night . . . which means it's going to be a tough summer for bachelor Indians, methinks . . . But, weddings or not, you can always dance to the music of George Reese and those Melodiers.

Tap Dancers at Dude Ranch

Underwood & Underwood.

Lee and Cody O'Neill are showing the folks a thing or two about tap dancing at the Dude Ranch this week. Their specialties are rhythm and syncopated taps. You'll see them at 10:30 and 12:30 nightly. An announcement of after-dark interest will be made by Richard S. Butler, manager of the Hamilton Hotel, next week. There is a suspicion it has to do with the Alexander room.

City Power Loans Refused by Court

Justice Luhring Issues a Temporary Order.

District Supreme Court Justice Oscar R. Luhring yesterday granted an injunction temporarily restraining the Public Works Administration from lending four Alabama cities funds for construction of municipal electrical distributing systems. Request for the injunction was made by the Alabama Power Co., of Birmingham.

Attorneys for the company charged tentative allotment of funds on a loan basis to Decatur, Florence, Sheffield and Tuscumbia was unconstitutional and would raise havoc with earnings.

The cities expected to erect power plants or induction lines to compete with the Alabama Power Co., which supplies electric power to 65 of the 67 counties of the State.

August 1 was set for the PWA's response.

Memorial Road To Gettysburg To Be Mapped

Immediate Survey Ordered Following Organization of Commission.

Extensive land surveys to determine the route of the proposed highway linking Mount Vernon, the Lincoln Memorial and the Gettysburg Battlefield will be started immediately, it was announced yesterday following the organization meeting of the Washington-Lincoln Memorial-Gettysburg Commission.

In his capacity as chairman ex-officio, President Roosevelt called commission members together yesterday for their first meeting. All 13 were present with the exception of Frederic A. Delano, who is in the West, and Speaker of the House Byrns.

Chief Thomas H. MacDonald, of the Bureau of Public Roads, who was elected executive chairman at the White House session, said afterward that facilities of the National Park Service and the roads bureau will be utilized in conducting the surveys.

It is still too early, he declared, to estimate the cost of the memorial boulevard, how many men will be put to work or how long it will be under construction. Congress, in authorizing the project, appropriated $10,000 for preliminary expenses.

"The commission has no preconceived notions," said MacDonald, "except that the highway shall be a fitting memorial to Washington and Lincoln."

Delano was elected vice chairman of the commission. The President's uncle is chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and vice chairman of the National Resources Board.

Other members of the body, besides those already named, are Vice President Garner, Senator Tydings, Representative Lewis, of Maryland; Senator Guffey and Representative Haines, of Pennsylvania; Commissioners Hazen and Sultan, Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, and Clarence Phelps Dodge.

When WJSV announced it would give a bray-by-bray account of the jackass baseball game from Alexandria, by way of breaking the summer program monotony, it was only the beginning.

Now the program minds at the C. B. S. office here have figured out one for next week. It will be a gulp-by-gulp account of the beer-drinking contest being staged by a local brewer in the interests of home pride and publicizing his product. Arch McDonald will be at the froth-side to describe the phenomenon which, no doubt, will be labeled a sports event.

Wednesday is the day; 12 to 12:30, the time.

Paul Muni will depart from the usual presentation of a scene from a forthcoming picture when he appears in Hollywood Hotel, WJSV, at 8, and instead will offer highlights from his past successes, including "Black Fury," "I'm a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," and his latest, "Bordertown." Frances Langford will sing "Murder in the Moonlight," with a comedy background employing the members of the cast. Dick Powell sings "What a Little Moonlight Will Do" and "Danny Boy."

The radio page in The Sunday Post will include a table of programs receiving votes in the preference poll and will show the number of first, second, third, fourth and fifth mentions each program has received. "One Man's Family" continues to lead, although other programs have gained in the last week. The poll form will be reprinted on the Sunday radio page. You will find the preferences of unusual interest. Clip out the form Sunday and send your five best liked programs in, too. Or list them on a post card. The more received, the more accurate the cross-section of tastes.

Henry Kaufman is toiling over the reports of the judges in the contest to select the best commercial announcer in Washington. Apparently the seven judges had widely divergent opinions on the matter. Mr. Kaufman, as the donor of the cup for the winner, asked each judge to list four announcers' names in order of preference. Two judges named only three, believing that a sure winner would come out of the first two names listed or three at most. However, not so. By any method of weighing the candidates in order of listing, a deadlock developed and hurried calls were sent out to the two judges who were deficient one name. On the naming of those two fourth-place candidates, might rest the final decision.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She will write of her experiences for The Post. Her twelfth article appears today.

Tom's Trading Post, N. Mex., July 25.—The Navajos don't like the New Deal, and they wish the white men would stay away. They don't want to reduce their herds. They don't want to pay taxes, and they don't want to go to war. And they fervently wish the Government wouldn't come around giving fancy jobs to their young men who only go to town and buy liquor and second hand cars and get drunk and into trouble . . .

The Indian is a slow-moving conservative, and the new Indian policy has been evolved too rapidly for him to understand. He never had any wealth save his silver and turquoises before the Spaniards brought in animals, and because the Spaniard counted his wealth in the number of his sheep and cattle, the Navajo does, too. He owns today one-seventh of all the sheep in the United States, and there are too many for quality, and they are ruining the range, causing frightful erosion. He can't grasp that. He's just afraid that if he takes money to reduce his flocks, the sheep will be gone, the Government money will be gone, and he'll be on relief, like the white man!

The missionaries don't help. They naturally resent the day schools so intelligently instituted by Indian Commissioner John Collier. Because when the Indian children live at home, they cannot convert them. So, working through converted Indians, the missionaries are opposing everything by telling the Navajos if they cooperate, they'll have to pay frightful taxes, be conscripted, and sent to war . . .

But the New Dealers are explaining to the Navajos that they've lost about a million dollars by voting against the Wheeler-Howard bill. And it's disturbing the Indians. So there's a great hubbub all over the reservation (about the size of the State of Pennsylvania), and silent spaces, these peaceful pueblos are agitated by one war-dance after another, called to talk things over, to discuss voting again. There was one held on the eve of the Fourth of July, in which 1,500 braves participated.

The medicine men, the wise old men of the tribes, are unhappy because the white men from Washington have brought their policy of high wages down here. Now t young men won't work for an thing less. An Indian boy who us to earn an occasional dollar a d interpreting for some friendly s entist now refuses to work at unless he gets the $2.50 or $3 ra the Government people paid him.

And for the first time they know the name of the Indian Co missioner. He's a household wo

New Blood Purge Threatens Reich In Nazi Campaign

American Editor Ordered to Leave

No Jews Are Chosen for Olympic Games in Germany.

The German Situation.

Fears of another "blood purge" grew in Germany as leaders pressed their drive on "reactionaries."

The German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among the athletes chosen to compete for places on the nation's team.

M. C. Harbeck, American editor of the German edition of the magazine Golden Age, was released by authorities and ordered to leave the country.

Mayor LaGuardia quoted State Department press releases to support his contention Americans have been discriminated against by Germany.

Berlin, July 26 (AP).—Uncertainty and tenseness growing out of the Nazis' big drive against "reactionaries" brought whispered conjecture today that another "blood purge" might result.

Jews and some diplomatic quarters compared the tactics employed against Jews, steel helmet war veterans and "political Catholicism" to those which preceded the June, 1934, blood letting, in which Adolf Hitler and his helpers eliminated unwanted party leaders.

[A United Press dispatch from Berlin reported Nazi leaders prepared a law definitely prohibiting marriages between Jews and Christians. It was understood their plans were prompted by conflicting court judgments on the Jewish-Christian marriage question.—Editor's note.]

A welter of rumors, dire predictions and fears expressed sotto voce, like those of June, 1934, accompanied progress of the offensive against "reactionaries."

Helmets Hit Again.

The Steel Helmets were today's worst sufferers. Gov. Erich Koch, of East Prussia, between Poland and Russia, dissolved their organization, adding the East Prussian units to those already under the Nazi ban in Silesia, Mecklenburg, Anhalt, Baden and Thuringia.

Catholics, too, were affected. Chief Heinrich Himler of the secret police ordering confessional youth groups to not wear uniforms or badges or carry flags. His decree duplicated that issued earlier this week by Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior.

New attention was focused upon Nazism's anti-Semitic campaign when the official German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among athletes chosen to compete for the German Olympic team. Jewish spokesmen promptly charged discrimination. Nazi officials denied it.

The anti-Jewish measures indicated increasing internal and financial troubles.

Dissension had arisen among Nazi leaders over questions of policies.

These were described officially as "nonsense." Nevertheless, they served to indicate Berlin's state of mind and some observers called them "straws in the wind."

Developments in the drive against Jews included the closing of municipal baths at Karlsrue, Freidburg, Gladbach and Dortmund to them. Badd Charlotte-Brunn officially decreed that orchestras there could not play works of Jewish composers.

"Whoever, as a German and a

Snob in Her Igloo.

IT WAS winter night [Rockwell Kent, the illustrator, told the story himself when he returned yesterday on the liner Deutschland after another adventure in the north] when he decided to leave the igloo of Salamina, the Eskimo hostess of himself and son, Donald, 14, for a year. This she had forbidden him to do. A terrific fight ensued in the 11-by-16 hut of ice. There was tumbling among Salamina's four children, 3, 7, 9 and 12 years old. It was rought, for the Eskimos are hardy.

Salamina was unaccustomed to having her orders disobeyed. She was an aristocrat of the village of Igdlorssuit, an island with a population of 165, and she ruled her igloo as she did most of the town. She was a fine character [Kent said], but she was a real snob. Worse than some of our best families. She warned me of some persons in town I was not permitted to talk with. She warned me against going out alone at night.

It was on the question of going out at night that the artist clashed with the primitive snob. He started out to take a walk and Salamina ordered him back from the exit of the igloo. He went ahead and she sprang at him. All the furniture in the place was broken, the artist said, and his little finger was smashed.

"I was about to brain her when my American chivalry got the best of me," he said.

He did not say whether he finally went out or not.

"The Eskimos are fine people," he said. "They are unhappy, but they don't know it. I wrote a book about Salamina. My son learned much and developed into a man there. I am glad he picked up some of the character of the Eskimos." Mr. Kent spent some time in Greenland years ago and went back this time for a year to give his son a taste of the life.

1,000 Nazi Foes Fight N. Y. Police

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—More than 1,000 Communist sympathizers and scores of police engaged in a battle around the pier from which the German liner Bremen sailed late tonight after an anti-Nazi demonstration.

Three of the demonstrators gained the bow of the crack liner, ripped the German flag from its pole and threw it into the Hudson River while hundreds cheered on the pier and in the streets below.

U. S. to Keep Out of Row In Ethiopia

Roosevelt Says America Will Stay Out of Controversies.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

President Roosevelt announces cardinal principles in this country's peace policy are "good neighbor" attitude and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern America. In the latter category he placed the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

European diplomats made eleventh-hour attempts, apparently without success, to obtain Mussolini's approval of wide economic concessions in Ethiopia, rather than a military victory.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday declared that the two cardinal principles of this Administration's policy to keep the Nation out of war were maintenance of friendly relations through observance of the "good neighbor" policy and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern the American people.

In reply to a question, the President said the Italo-Ethiopian controversy would fall in the latter class. He also thought preparedness for defense was a third point in the country's keep-out-of-war program, but he regarded this as subordinate to the other two principles.

Mr. Roosevelt did not indicate that this Government would wash its hands of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. His point was that it did not concern this country, aside from general interest in maintaining world peace and except for personal feelings of some Americans regarding the controversy. The latter, however, could not be controlled by Government decrees, he said.

No Policy Change.

The President's qualification of his answer that this Nation was not concerned with the plight of Ethiopia, aside from our general interest in world peace, was taken to indicate there would be no change of policy in regard to the threatened Italo-Ethiopian war. That policy has been to deprecate resort to hostilities and to support every step toward a pacific solution of the dispute without involving this country.

Shortly before the President spoke, pressure was brought on Capitol Hill and at the State Department to have this Government take steps to discourage Adolph Hitler's Germany from further persecution of religious groups—actions which might well come under the President's ban of becoming involved in controversies which do not concern this country.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, introduced a resolution in the Senate calling for an investigation of German discrimination against Jews and Catholics. King would have the Senate Foreign Relations Committee conduct the inquiry and would direct that group to "recommend what way the cause of tolerance and religious freedom may be served."

Nazi Inquiry Pressed.

His resolution would require the committee to inquire particularly into "charges that Jewish citizens have been denied their political and civil rights and have been compelled to leave Germany." The resolution would appropriate $5,000 for the conduct of the inquiry.

Earlier in the week King, denouncing Nazi "oppressive acts"

Bank Funds Up Sharply, Failures End

D. C. Leads Nation in Drop in Aid, Hopkins Report Shows.

Bank failures have practically ceased, banks have recovered a large part of the deposits lost in the early stages of the depression, and the number of families on relief declined 6.6 per cent from May to June.

The Federal Reserve Board's July bulletin disclosed that deposits in the 24,630 operating banks in the country declined from the peak of $55,289,000,000 on December 31, 1929, to a low of $37,998,000,000 on June 30, 1933, a decrease of $17,291,000,000. However, by December 31, 1934, deposits had climbed again to $44,771,000,000, a gain of $6,773,000,000, although the number of banks had fallen to 16,042.

Along with the recovery in bank deposits, the Reserve Board reported a virtual cessation of bank failures. In the first six months of this year only 16 banks, with combined deposits of $3,299,000 closed their doors, as compared with 56 banks having deposits of $36,944,000 in 1934, and several thousand banks with several billion dollars of deposits in 1932.

Relief Burden Cut.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, reported the decline in the number of families on relief. He said 4,100,932 families were depending on the Government aid in May, and 3,830,871 in June. Expenditures declined 9.8 per cent, from $188,323,706 in May to $169,840,125 in June.

The percentages of decline in the District of Columbia were even greater than the average for the country. The number of families on relief here dropped from 13,159 to 11,941, or 9.3 per cent, and the expenditures fell off from $932,353 to $785,444, a percentage of 15.8.

Another announcement by Hopkins was on the appointment of four technical assistants to direct formulation of white-collar projects in four major arts, music, the theater, writing and painting.

They will develop the projects to give employment to needy cultural workers who will be transferred from relief rolls to jobs under the Works Progress Administration. They are to function in the professional and service projects division under which the $300,000,000 appropriated for assistance to educational, professional and clerical persons is being administered.

Directors Named.

Nikolai Sokoloff, of Connecticut, was appointed to direct music projects; Holger Cahill, of New York, to direct art projects; Hallie Flanagan, of Vassar College, to direct theater projects, and Henry G. Alsberg, of Washington, to direct projects for writers.

Sokolai won fame as a conductor of major symphony orchestras in Cleveland, San Francisco, Cincinnati and New York.

Cahill has contributed extensively to the literature on American art. He wtas on the staff of the Newark Museum under the late John Cotton Dana, and later organized numerous exhibitions, including the Exhibition of American Painting and Sculpture from 1865 to 1932, which brought Whistler's "Portrait of Artist's Mother" to America.

Hallie Flanagan, in private life the wife of Prof. Philip H. Davis, of Vassar, for nine years has been professor of English and director of the Experimental Theater at Vassar.

Alsberg, for a year and a half has been supervisor of reports and bulletins for FERA here. He was

A wholesale deportation order, one of the greatest in the country's history, was approved yesterday by President Roosevelt to rid the Nation of 151 counterfeiters, narcotics offenders, postal law violators and other criminals, all aliens.

At the same time it was learned that Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red," who is said to have "put the finger" on John Dillinger, also is scheduled for deportation. Now living in Chicago, she will be sent back to her native Rumania next month, Labor Department officials said.

Only one woman, Bessie Murray, is among the 151 who will be released from Federal prisons and sent back to the countries whence they came. A native of Ireland, she is serving a term in Alderson penitentiary for violation of the postal laws.

Twenty-seven countries in Europe, Asia and South America are represented on the list of deportees. Italy supplied 62 prisoners. There are 16 Chinese, all of whom were sentenced under the anti-narcotics laws.

Criminal aliens from Canada and Mexico, contiguous countries, were not included in the roundup, the Department of Justice explained, because past experience has proved it is not difficult for them to slip back inside the United States.

The surprise move by the Government was attributed to economy reasons. Length of sentences, prison records and offenses of every alien confined in a Federal prison were studied by Attorney General Cummings' office before the selection was made.

Recommendations submitted to President Roosevelt for riddance of the 151 were authorized by the recent statutes which state that any alien is subject to deportation who violates the narcotic laws, commits a felony within the first five years after entry or commits two felonies over any period of time.

The conflict of Mrs. Sage, the "woman in red," with the immigration laws hinges on her arrest in East Chicago, Ind., on a charge of operating a disorderly house. Officials are said to have given her one month to settle her affairs. The Bureau of Investigation has refused consistently to confirm reports that

Glass Scores a Major Victory As Senate Passes Banking Bill

Associated Press and Harris & Ewing Photos.

Indignant words were used in hearings and conferences in the Capitol yesterday. Left to right; Frank E. Speicher, who, before the House military hearing, said Joseph Silverman, Army surplus supplies dealer, told him he had the Assistant Secretary of War's office "in the palm of his hand;" Representative Patton, who, before the Senate Lobby Committee, admitted buying $3,000 bonds in a period his salary totaled $3,100, and Representative Huddleston and Senator Wheeler, who called each other names in conference on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Central Bank Proposal Sponsored by Nye Swamped 59 to 10.

Routed Libebrals Turn to Conferees

La Follette Is Hopeful Administration Might Yet Recover.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's banking bill, minus central bank features and without a single liberalizing amendment, yesterday was approved by the Senate by a resounding voice vote, following three days of brisk debate.

The measure was sent to conference, where Administration forces will make a last stand to strengthen Federal Reserve Board credit powers, and recoup losses suffered at the hands of Senator Glass, of Virginia.

The 77-year-old former Secretary of the Treasury and veteran of 32 years in Congress won one of the most sweeping victories of his career, in the final draft of the measure, despite "concessions—concessions even of convictions."

In the end no Senator demanded a record vote. Glass, a bit weary and hoarse from continuous debate, shuffled slowly from his seat to receive the congratulations of colleagues—friends and foes alike of the banking bill.

Priest's Plan Swamped.

Of less than a dozen amendments, only three were pressed to a Senate vote, and all of these were overwhelmingly defeated.

Shortly after the Senate met yesterday, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, called for a test on Father Charles E. Coughlin's Government-owned central bank proposals. On a roll call vote, the substitute was beaten, 59 to 10.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, met a similar fate in moving to eliminate authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues. His amendment was voted down, 39 to 22.

A day earlier, Senator Louis Murphy (Democrat), of Iowa, had failed by a voice vote to scrap a section of Title ', which requires State banks with deposits of $1,000,000 and more to join the Federal Reserve system by July 1, 1937, or lose their deposit insurance.

In the parade to passage, a number of amendments were offered for the record, and never pressed to a vote. Among these were two amendments advanced by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, authorizing the Government to buy all stock in the 12 regional Reserve banks, and the Goldsborough "commodity dollar" proposal, favored by the Committee for the Nation.

LaFollette Quits Fight.

LaFollette likewise failed to press amendments that would have denied Federal Reserve banks voting representation on the open market committee, and stricken the section permitting a director of a Federal Reserve member bank to be a director also of not more than one other bank.

LaFollette charged there was "a virtual gentleman's agreement, which makes it impossible for senators to vote their convictions."

"I have just learned that I cannot get a real test of strength," he asserted. "Many who agree with me would vote against me. The reason is that there has been a long controversy in the committee, and these senators do not want to jeopardize the bill in further protracted argument."

The Wisconsin Progressive, however, insisted upon an "aye" and "no" vote on his amendment to strike out authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues.

"Unloading of securities upon customers of commercial banks resulted in the wiping out of investments of thousands upon thousands, and the final collapse of the stock market," he declared. "This is the nose under the camel's tent. We will write this section into law, and next session there will be a move to go farther."

Opposing the LaFollette amendment, Glass recalled that he had condemned conditions that made the rigid restrictions in the banking act of 1933 necessary; that he had deplored the flooding of the country

Utility Conferees in Deadlock; Bid to 'Swing' Army Deal Bared

By James D. Secrest.

Senators and Representatives very nearly came to blows yesterday in one of the bitterest rows of the session, further tightening the deadlock on the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill, as the Senate lobby committee pressed Representative Patton (Democrat), of Texas, to explain how he bought $3,000 worth of Government bonds when he had drawn only $3,100 in salary.

Statements flew thick and fast during the afternoon as Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, made another attempt to regain the spotlight for the House lobby inquiry by issuing a statement which in effect warned Administration lobbyists to stay clear of the Speaker's lobby and cloakrooms.

Senate and House conferees were agreed on only one thing, that they had reached an impasse which probably can be settled only by taking the bill back to both chambers for a vote on the "death clause" or for appointment of new conferees.

Cohen Is Issue.

The point at issue between the Senators and Representatives was not the death sentence, however, but the question of whether Benjamin Cohen, Administration legislative aid, should be permitted to participate in the conference. Dozier A. DeVane, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, whose presence was also opposed on Wednesday, did not appear yesterday.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, was the focal point of the conference row, first clashing with Representative Cooper (Republican), of Ohio, and then with Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama.

He is reported to have threatened to invade Cooper's district during the next campaign in an effort to defeat him. To this the Ohioan replied: "I told him to come ahead. I would welcome it."

With Huddleston the argument became more personal after Wheeler had insinuated that the Alabaman was playing into the hands of the public utilities. Huddleston is reported to have retorted with an attack in which the epithet "fourflusher" was used.

Senate, House Divided.

The conference broke up after the Senate conferees voted unanimously to insist on Cohen remaining, while the House managers voted 3 to 2 to refuse to participate in the conference so long as he was present. Only Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, voted with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, to accept the Senators' ultimatum.

"The position of Mr. Holmes, Mr. Cooper and myself, constituting a majority of the House conferees, is that under all circumstances it would be manifestly improper for a representative of the executive branch to be present during our confidential deliberations," Huddleston said subsequently in a formal statement.

"We hold that it is fundamental to our system of government that the legislative branch should be permitted to function without influence from the executive branch * * *

"As servants of the House we are charged with the responsibility of upholding its dignity and prestige. This can not be done with a representative of the Administration sit-

New Yorker Says Silverman Planned to Split $10,000,000 Order.

By the Associated Press.

The purported inside story of a plan to split a $10,000,000 Army motor car order between Chrysler and Chevrolet was related yesterday to the House Military Committee.

It was told by Frank Speicher, New York dealer in inner tubes. He said that back of the plan was Joseph Silverman, jr., who at one time conducted a huge business in excess Army supplies.

For a 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman sought to arrange with Norman K. Haig, General Motors Co. official, to set up a General Motors agency in Washington to which, through his alleged influence with the War Department, Silverman was to swing the truck and automobile contract.

Federal agents hunted Speicher for months last year as a witness in the inquiry, now being continued by the committee.

Yesterday he told the committee that Silverman claimed to have influence with the War Department because Ralph O'Neal, past national commander of the American Legion, "the closest man to Woodring in the United States," was on the Silverman pay roll. Harry W. Woodring is Assistant Secretary of War.

Silverman claimed, too, Speicher asserted, that he had been able to obtain inclusion in the specifications for the motor equipment—mostly for the CCC—of a provision which would have blocked Chevrolet bids.

But for the 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman proposed to Haig that he, Silverman, could have the provision eliminated and divide the contract between Chrysler and Chevrolet.

Speicher said he was interested in seeing Chevrolet obtain Army orders so that Haig would give him inner tube business.

Despite the fact that Silverman offered both Haig and himself a 2½ per cent cut, Speicher said, he warned Haig he might get in trouble with Silverman because he had learned the 7½ per cent commission was to be added to the regular price of the cars for the Army.

Speicher said he refused then to become involved, explaining:

"I was not dumb enough to get in a conspiracy like that to hook the Government.

The name of Frederick H. Payne, former assistant Secretary of War, was brought into the investigation.

Speicher testified flatly that Payne, in his hotel room here, told Haig he knew Silverman, had dealt with him a long time and that Haig had "better put him on the pay roll as he could do a lot of good for you."

President Cool To Complaints Of Steel Trade

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated that he believes the complaint of domestic steel manufacturers against a PWA order which would give them a 15 per cent preferential over foreign competitors is unjustified.

Through Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the domestic industry complained not against the preferential granted to them, but because it was not much greater. Indeed, Grace indicated he did not think that foreign steel makers should be permitted to compete at all on PWA or other Government projects under the $4,000,000,000 works fund, since the latter was designed to help American employment.

The President pointed out that under previous administrations the domestic steel industry had enacted tariff rates which they wanted and which it was contended would equalize the difference between production at home and abroad.

Is General Rule.

The PWA had in effect added 15 per cent to these tariff rates to aid the domestic industry, he said, by providing that unless the bid of a foreign manufacturer was at least 15 per cent less than a domestic bidder it should be disregarded. He said that this had been adopted as a general rule in making Government purchases.

The rule recently was set aside, the President said, in the case of a purchase of airplane cloth. In that case the bid of a Japanese manufacturer, he explained, was exactly one-half of the bid of the only American concern engaged in the business. Although it meant the Government would pay twice as much as necessary, it was decided to accept the American bid on the ground that airplane cloth is an essential article of national defense and that its manufacture in this country should be encouraged.

The President said he did not think any foreign-made steel was being used on PWA projects. One of the correspondents at his press conference, however, contended that large quatities of foreign cement had been used in erecting Government buildings here.

The foreign cement, he insisted, was brought over as ship ballast and sold much under the price of the domestic product. When ques-

Quantico Marine Corps Base Facing Transfer to San Diego

Plans to shift the headquarters of the Fleet Marine Corps from Quantico, Va., to San Diego, Calif., are being considered at Marine headquarters, it was learned yesterday. If the contemplated move is carried out about 50 officers and 600 enlisted men will be transferred to the West Coast.

Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the corps, and his staff have completed plans for the transfer, and these have been forwarded to Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the fleet. He has not yet approved of the change, but officers at Marine headquarters here are confident that his approval shortly will be forthcoming.

Lack of housing facilities at Quantico, as well as the necessity of having the fleet Marine force with the naval fleet, now in the Pacific, were given as reasons for the contemplated change.

If approval is forthcoming, the transfer will be made about September 1, it was stated. New recruits to the corps will replace the 600 men taken from Quantico, through the canal, on a transport to San Diego.
